Irradiation Approved For Meat

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

WASHINGTON, DC — The Food and Drug Administration early this week approved irradiation of meat products for controlling disease-causing microorganisms. The approval applies to fresh and frozen red meats such as beef, lamb, and pork and joins ranks with previously approved vegetables and fruits.

"Irradiation of meat could prove to be another important tool to protect consumers from food-borne disease," said Michael Friedman, M.D., FDA commissioner. "The process has been shown to be safe and to significantly reduce bacterial contamnination."

This line of reasoning seems to be prevalent among most major food and health organizations, as well as agricultural organizations. In an announcement related to FDA's ruling by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association and distributed by the Pennsylvania Beef Council, officials applauded the freedom to allow beef processors to use irradiation.

"In order to maintain the safest food supply in the world, the beef industry needs the flexibility to use new technologies as they become available," said Van Amundson, chairman, beef safety committee. "Irradiation, also known as cold pasteurization, has been proven safe and effective in improving and protecting the safety and wholesomeness of food products. Irradiation can destroy harmful bacteria on food without compromising the flavor or nutritional value of the product. Research shows that irradiation of ground beef does not adversely affect flavor, aroma, color, or shelf life."

Richard Lechowich, director of the National Center for Food Safety and Technology at the Illinois Institute of Technology, says the benefits of food irradiation are overwhelming. E. coli, salmonella, and many other species of bacteria found in most uncooked chicken and turkey could be eliminated and could have prevented thousands of illnesses every year.

But the method is not being used even though it is legal for many foods. The problem is not with irradiation itself, but with people's perception of radiation's link with the atomic bomb.

The food supply is an emotional

Environment, Technology Awareness Spell Success For Pa. Pork President

YORK SPRINGS (Adams Co.) — "College taught me what I didn't want to do instead of what I did want to do."

Late in the week, as Dave Reinecker was preparing to head down to Washington to officiate a college basketball game, the new Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council (PPPC) president talked about the importance of adapting new technology, keeping an open mind, and thinking about the future of an industry under fire.

Reinecker was graduated in 1977 from Western Maryland College in Westminster, Md. with a bachelor's in chemistry. He has worked on his father's beef finishing farm since childhood.

Reinecker said he considers himself one of the "lucky five percent" of the people who actually enjoy their job.

"Ninety-five percent of the people in this country don't enjoy what they do in the morning when they get up," he said. "I'm part of the other five percent."

He told Lancaster Farming during a recent interview at his farm, "How many people do you

Advertising/News Deadlines For Holidays, Farm Show Issue

December brings the anticipation of Christmas and the New Year. And for farm families the annual trip to Harrisburg for the Pennsylvania Farm Show is not far behind. For Lancaster Farming this means many of the advertising and news deadlines will need to be early to accommodate the publication of the December 27, January 3, and January 9 issues. Some deadlines fall in the week prior to the week of publication.

These deadlines are as follows:

December 27th Issue

Public Sale Ads — Noon, Monday, 12/22.
Mailbox Markets — Noon, Monday, 12/22.
Section D Classified Ads — 3 p.m., Tuesday, 12/23.
Farm Equipment Ads — 9 a.m., Wednesday, 12/24.
All Other Display Ads — 5 p.m., Monday, 12/22
General News — Noon, Wednesday, 12/24.

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Wheat bids slipped lower again today, pressured by continued slow export sales and good winter wheat condition. Corn bids finished mixed. Good overnight export orders offered support. However, better- than-expected quality of the Eastern European corn which has been selling below US export prices, limited gains. Soybean bids were slightly higher on good export orders overnight for beans and meal. Some weakness was noted, however, due to reports of ideal planting and growing weather in South America. Wheat 1 to 2 cents lower ex- cept Minneapolis 4 cents higher. Corn mixed, mostly steady. Sorghum steady. Soybeans 2 to 4 cents higher.

Delmarva Broiler

ATLANTA, GA

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was generally noted as disappointingly below expectations. Offerings were fully sufficient to handle current requirements. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights varied in a range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate to heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 48 to 62 cents. Trade sentiment was steady, but cautious. In the parts complex, all items were fully sufficient for the limited buying interest.

NY Phila Frozen Eggs

ATLANTA, GA

EASTERN REGION FROZEN EGGS, NOVEMBER 28, 1997. FEDERAL-STATE

Prices were unchanged. The market tone was steady. Demand slowed with many buyers working reduced holiday schedules. Floor stocks were generally adequate, but yolks were still sometimes tight. Liquid and frozen eggs processed (ingredients included) under federal inspection in the eastern region for the week ending November 22, 1997 were 1% less than last week, and 9% more than the same week last year. Raw material supplies increased, particularly breaking stock, and prices were unchanged to lower.

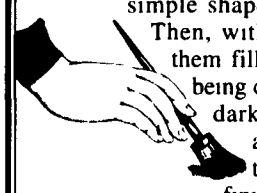
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

DECEMBER 1-7, 1997

ST. NICHOLAS, DECEMBER 6.

WHAT'S THE POINT?

December 2 marks the birth of George Seurat, born in France in 1859 and famous for the painting technique known as pointillism. Let children experiment with the technique for making holiday cards. Give them a small card or white paper and have them outline a simple shape, such as a sled or ornament.



Then, with cotton swabs and paints, let them fill the outline with dots of color, being careful not to mix the colors Use darker colors for the shaded areas and lighter colors for areas turned toward the viewer. Put the finished cards on the mantel, stand back, and let your eyes mix the colors from a distance

Painters and poets have leave to lie.

TIP OF THE WEEK

BEIGNETS

1 package dry yeast
1/2 cup warm water
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon oil
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt (optional)
3 cups flour
oil for deep frying
powdered sugar

Dissolve yeast in the warm water. Add next five ingredients plus optional salt, if desired, then beat in the flour. Dough will be sticky. On a floured board, roll out the dough to about ⅛ inch. Cut into 2-inch squares. Heat oil to 370° F. Drop beignets in oil a few at a time. As they puff, turn them to brown other side Remove, drain, and dust with powdered sugar.

Makes 2 to 3 dozen.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

When the grouse drum at night, there will be a deep fall of snow.

When soot falls down the chimney, rain is near.

Under water, famine; under snow, bread.

When we take your milk to market, you take home a lot more than just money.

Dairylea's milk marketing network stretches from Maine to Ohio to Maryland, providing a market for your milk and competitive prices. But that's not all, because there's value added too.

In addition to paying our farmer members an average premium of 30 cents per hundredweight, no one else can offer the wide array of programs and services available exclusively from Dairylea. We focus our efforts on developing resources that can help generate more revenue or achieve real cost savings for you. With our help, the average farmer can also save up to 40 cents per hundredweight.

So take action today. Call us toll-free at 800/654-8838 and find out more about Dairylea.

OPINION

Learning From History

To find bits of history about farm life is most enjoyable. This week we came across Volume 4 of the children's encyclopedia, The Book of Knowledge, with copyrights of 1874 to 1918 by The Grolier Society in New York and The Educational Book Co. in London. In a section entitled "The World's Bread & Butter," we found pictures of 30-mule teams pulling reapers and threshing machines, roller mills to make flour, dough mixing machines, and bread ovens.

To go with the bread, of course you need butter. And children should know "where the butter comes from."So, a long line of cows is shown in tie stalls with eight milkers, (they look like men but the text says the farmer's daughters often did this work) accomplishing the job by hand. (See page A28.)

The cutline says, "After bread comes butter, which we get from the milk of the cow. This picture shows the interior of a model dairy barn which holds fifty cows. Every effort is made to keep the milk clean. The barn is light, the floor is of cement, which is kept clean by a hose, the cows are brushed and washed every day, and the men wear special suits of white duck which are put on at milking time and kept for that work only."

Of course, butter churns, and butter molds and prints are also shown. And a detailed expose' on how you get butter from milk is given so each child reading this encyclopedia will have had full knowledge of the process.

"But if we have bread on the table, there must be butter on it too," the text says. "How is that to be had? A glass of milk does not seem much like butter for use with bread, but the butter is in the milk.

"The milk is full of the tiniest parcels of fat. The fat is not floating about in a mass in the milk. It is in a great many tiny globules, and each globule is neatly packed up in the tiniest, thinnest skin or membrane.

"When the milk is churned, it is so violently knocked about that the tiny skins holding the fat break. The fat floats out, and the churning causes all the little drops of fat to become joined together. That mass of fat after proper treatment, becomes the butter that we eat."

Today, we are afraid to talk about fat in milk except in the negative. Whole milk is 95 percent fat free. But with the big run on two percent, one percent, and skim milk, we have sacrificed the good taste of milk on the alter of diet fads. No wonder our promotion dollars have such a hard time to keep consumers coming back to the milk fountain. We could double consumption in ten days if every quart of milk tasted as good as it does, cold and delicious, right out of the bulk tank on the farm.

And if like 100 years ago, we could get honest commentary about modern farming operations in children's encyclopedias, society would grow up to appreciate the blessings we have because of an abundant food supply.

To Manage Firewood

Dr. Timothy Elkner, Lancaster County Extension Horticultural Agent, reminds us, a pile of firewood is an ideal place for insects and spiders to hibernate through the winter. Always wear gloves when reaching into a wood pile. Many inhabitants of your wood pile are capable of biting

Although there is little chance of being bitten by a poisonous insect, any bite will still be painful. Besides spiders, other pests living in wood piles include wood borers, beetles, carpenter ants, termites, bees and wood roaches.

Store fire wood outdoors in an open area as far away from the house as practical. Stack firewood off the ground to reduce wood rot and pest problems. Never stack wood against your house. Cover the wood pile with plastic or sheet metal roofing to keep the wood dry.

To Burn Firewood

Dr. Timothy Elkner, Lancaster County Extension Horticultural Agent, offers the following tips on using firewood. When cold weather arrives, pieces of firewood may be moved nearer to the house for easy access. Firewood should be stored on a rack, patio or deck instead of on the ground. Bring only enough firewood into the house to be burned immediately. Firewood stored inside the home over an hour may warm up enough for the insects to emerge from within or under the bark and start their spring activities early. Do not store firewood in a heated garage or basement for the same reasons.

To Submit Farm Safety Grants

For the third year in a row, the Farm Safety and Occupational Health (FSOH) Grant Program will award financial assistance, of up to $2,500, to statewide farm organizations, volunteer fire companies, ambulance services and rescue squads within the commonwealth or a coalition of these organizations that wish to develop and deliver farm safety, occupational health and emergency response programs. The goal of the program is to prevent accidents before they happen.

The applications will be evaluated using the following criteria: 1. the relevance and innovativeness, 2. the geographic area of the project and the number of people affected, 3. the extent to which the applicant has secured in-kind or financial contributions, 4. the impact and value of the project upon the agricultural community, 5. the extent to which the project involves cooperative efforts of eligible organizations for farm safety and occupational health, and 6. the availability of funding from a source other than the FOSH Grant Program so that the project may continue.

Grant applications are available from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture by contacting Ms. Shiree Hunter, Bureau of Plant Industry, 2301 N. Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA 17110. The deadline for applications is January 30, 1998.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor,

The problem we had with our fence controller is that it needed to be located remotely from our farmhouse. Yet many evenings I wanted to save the time it took to walk over to it to make sure the little flasher or the meter was showing proper operation. I built the inexpensive neon fence indicator for a bit over a dollar, using scrap material that will be found on any farm.

We placed this in a field opposite our kitchen window on a fence over 300 feet away, and it shows up bright and clear with a flash every other second. Best yet, unlike the commercial units, it draws so little power that it can even be used with battery powered or solar fence chargers.

The only purchased materials were a small neon "pig-tail" bulb, and a 40,000 ohm resistor (¼ watt). The other materials consisted of a discarded flashlight lens/reflector (L-R) assembly (If the silvering is worn off the reflector, just paint it white-works fine), a 3 x 8-inch piece of aluminum (PL), a short lenght of stranded lamp cord (or equal) wire (only 1 conductor is needed, so you can discard the other conductor), and a piece of 15-inch long metal rod to drive into the earth as a ground.

ARE YOU A GNOSTIC?

December 7, 1997

Background Scripture:
I John 1:through 2:11
Devotional Reading:
John 1:1-14

In early Christianity many Greek words became part of Christian vocabulary. Two of these words were orthodoxia and hairesis, which we render in English as orthodox and heresy. Orthodoxy meant "right opinion" and the term came to represent Christian beliefs which were judged to be true Christian doctrine.

Originally, hairesis had no negative implications. It meant a "system or school of thought." It implied a choice of one's way of belief. In the early Church, however, hairesis came to represent the choice of what is not true.

Early Christianity struggled constantly with a variety of heresies: Marcionism, Montanism, Sabellianism, Arianism, Eutychianism, Monophysitism, Nestorianism, Pelagianism and Gnosticism.

Orthodox Christianity eventually prevailed over each of these heresies which eventually died out and have simply become part of Christian history. Except that, from time to time, some of these beliefs spring up, although generally not under the name of the ancient heresy that represent.

HERESY! HERESY!

Heresy is a term which is usually not part of Christian vocabulary today. We may know what it means, but we never use it ourselves and rarely, if ever, hear others use it. The idea that someone might consciously choose to believe in something heretical is foreign to most of us. We grant that people sometimes believe in something untrue, but if so, we think of it as simply a mistake, not a purposeful unorthodoxy.

It is therefore interesting to discover that Gnosticism, one of the most pervasive early heresies, taught that evil was simply error and ignorance, unfortunate beliefs for which a person could not be held responsible. They believed that Christ came into the world primarily to being us knowledge (gnosis) of the truth. Knowing the truth was tantamount to salvation. So what people needed, Gnostics taught, was not forgiveness, but illumination.

Christian orthodoxy, on the other hand, taught that sin is the root of evil, willful disobedience of God. Under this concept people were responsible for their sins and very much in the need of forgiveness. True discipleship was not to be found in what one believed, but in what one did about his or her beliefs. Here we find the true connection between beliefs and deeds: what we believe should affect how we live. Knowing the mysteries of God is of no use whatsoever if we do not live righteously and penitently before God.

JESUS: A REAL HUMAN

All of the above is by way of introduction to I John. The author, probably the same man who wrote the fourth gospel, is writing to people who are being besieged by Gnostic teachings. The Gnostics taught that Christ was not a real human being, he only appeared to be. So, the author begins by saying as strongly as he can that Jesus was a real man which the apostles themselves experienced: "Thata which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon and touched with our hands. . ."

The imagery of light to describe God was a popular Gnostic teaching. John says, yes, "God is light and in him is no darkness at all." and you cannot live in darkness and have fellowship with the light. "Darkness" here means sinful behavior, which is more than ignorance, it is rebellion against God and calls for repentence. Christians need to live righteously, avoiding sin, but, if they sin, and all of us do, the gospel has a remedy: "but if any one does sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; and he is the expiation for our sins. . ."

Neither, says the author, can we share in the light and be illumined if we fail to believe and live by the old commandment which is ever new: love one another. "He who says he is in the light and hates his brother is in the darkness still." You cannot have right beliefs without love. You cannot hate and be correct in your beliefs.

We don't call it gnosticism today, but the heresy is still with us here and there, now and then. You can't know the truth and fail to love your neighbor.

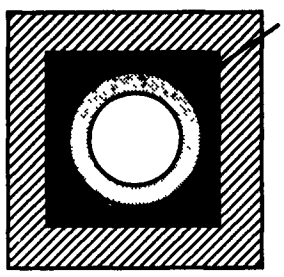
... For New Construction Why Not Examine The "Chimtek Difference."



Chimtek Inner Liners are madeof volcanic pumice and high-tempertature refractory cements, Its round shape provides even temperature inside flue and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gasses. The volcanic pumice in Chimteck liners adds considerable insulating value.

All three chimneyliner systems disbrttubed by DS Machine Shop are of super design, super performance, and super value. With all their advantages these chimney systems often cost no more than ordinary chimneys. Write or call us for more specific liner information.

News From New Bolton Center...

School of Veterinary Medicine
UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine Is Looking For Volunteers To "Foal Sit" At Its Neonatal Intensive Care Unit During Foaling Season

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — Each year during the foaling season New Bolton Center has volunteer opportunities in the neonatal Intensive Care Unit because the neonates require lots of care. Do you have time to volunteer in the spring (an average of one shift a week or more)? Do you like horses and love foals? Are you curious about cutting edge veterinary medicine? If so, join our neonatal intensive care team as a volunteer foal sitter. Every foaling season New Bolotn Center's Connelly Intensive Care Unit/Graham French Neonatal Sections provides around-the-clock care for approximately 100 to 120 critically ill newborn foals and 20 to 30 mares with high-risk pregnancies. Foaling season runs from the beginning of February through the end of June. Our volunteer foal sitters are an important part of the NICU team. The tasks volunteers perform can be tiring, strenuous, and bruising. There is a lot of lifting and kneeling.

Job Description: A foal sitter's responsibilities include working with critically ill newborn foals (and occasionally other newborns); caring for recumbent foals by helping them to lie sternally and to stand, and by keeping them clean and dry with frequent grooming and bedding changes; keeping an assortment of oxygen and intravenous fluid lines from tangling and assisting nurses and doctors by holding foals during treatments; milking and grooming mares; helping with pregnant mares as they are being monitored for signs of impending delivery; helping exercise mares and foals; and assisting nurses with various tasks, including stocking, cleaning of equipment and doing laundry.

Hours: Eight-hour shifts are available 24 hours per day, seven days per week. Hours are somewhat flexible, but it is required that all volunteers contribute at least one shift per week.

Qualification: Volunteers must be at least sixteen years of age and must have their own means of transportation. Horse experience is appreciated but not required. These tasks involve turning and lifting recumbent but often struggling foals. Individuals with problem backs or knees may have difficulty performing these tasks.

Location: New Bolton Center is located just off Route 1 at the Route 82/Kennett Square exit, approximately 15 minutes south of West Chester, 50 minutes southwest of Philadelphia, and 25 minutes northwest of Wilmington. Parking at New Bolton Center is free. There is no public transportation in the Kennett Square area.

How To Apply: Contact: Dr. Jon Palmer, VMD Associate Professor of Medicine, New Bolton Center, 382 West Street Rd., Kennett Square, PA 19348, email: jepalmer@vet.upenn.edu Fax: (610) 444-4724.

There will be an organizational meeting for all selected volunteers in January of 1998. The meeting will cover details of the program and include a tour of the NICU. Necessary administrative paperwork will be completed for those individuals who are selected to participate in the program.

El Nino Forecasts Focus Of December Agronomy Meetings

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A favorable winter for growing wheat could be one of El Nino's early impacts on the Midwest, said James Newman, climatology professor emeritus of Purdue University's agronomy department.

Normal temperatures, less rain, and increased snowfall may provide a warm blanket of snow to protect Midwestern wheat from freezing this winter, Colder winters with less snow, such as last year's, often damage wheat.

"A winter can have drier-than-normal precipitation and still have above-normal snowfall," Newman said. "It takes 10 to 12 inches of snow to create 1 inch of water, and this winter is likely to be just that, a drier-than-normal winter with above-normal snowfall in much of the Corn Belt."

Newman will discuss seasonal climate forecasting and the potential impacts of El Nino on world grain markets and U.S. agriculture during Ohio State University Extension regional agronomy meetings held at five different locations in Ohio, Dec. 15-19.

Other scheduled meeting topics include: nitrogen management in corn; biotechnology management of corn and soybeans; present site specific management systems; new corn, soybean and forage insecticides for 1998; integrated weed management systems; corn and soybean disease management; precision farming; new corn and soybean herbicides for 1998; and corn marketing opportunities and management concerns.

The first regional agronomy meeting was held last year at Ohio State University's Lima Campus to bring the most up-to-date Ohio State agronomy information to farmers, agribusiness representatives and other members of the agricultural community, said Max Mohler, co-coordinator of extension's agronomy team.

"We decided to increase from one to five locations, so the information is more available to the agricultural community," Mohler said.

There will be some local specialization by site, but all five programs will be mostly the same, he said.

Attendees can earn private and commercial applicator credits and certified crop adviser credits. Meeting participants also will receive a program proceedings and a booklet containing results from this year's Ohio State agronomic test plots throughout the state.

"Information has to pass from researcher to user quicker than it has in the past, and that's what we're trying to do with these meetings," Mohler said. "If you want to stay up on the latest crop production information in Ohio, these are the meetings to attend."

All the meetings will run from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Preregistration for each meeting is $15 and includes lunch. On-site registration is $30 per person.

Meeting sites and who to contact for more information are:

Bowmans Quick Farming Success

Rick and Chris Bowman with some of their Holsteins are proud of their recent DHIA award.

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

LOYSBURG (Bedford Co.) — Bedford County recipients of the 1997 DHIA awards were presented at a recent banquet held at the NBC School.

Winning the Herd Management and Most Production Progress awards were R&J Farms owned by Rick and Chris Bowman of New Enterprise.

The brothers run a 82-dairy head of registered Holsteins. Renting the barn, they buy all of their feed. "This was a good year to do that," Rick says, who began farming six years ago and was joined by brother Chris following his discharge from the Army. Rick and Chris became partners in February.

"It's been a lot of hard work," says Chris, "But, we're proud of our record."

This year, production was 20,428 and last year 14,272. Other records which earned them the "most improved," award were: Fat, 725, up from 540. Protein, 647 up from 465.

Sematic call increase averaged 300.

Rick does all of the breeding, carefully selecting the sires. "We look for bulls with outstanding records and 300 to 500 daughters," he explains. The brothers both admit to being good with vet work.

"We are also careful about how we feed," Chris adds. "We feel that when and how is as important as what!"

They add water to make sure there is plenty of moisture. If the feed is dry, it separates from the forage. They also feed stale bread mixed with the other rations."

Milk is shipped to Sani-Dairy.

In addition to the 82 head of milk cows, the Bowman brothers have 60 head of young cattle.

They recently purchased a concrete planner which is used to do free stall grooving. "It's a side line business," says Chris who adds anyone can call (814) 766-3952 if they would like more information.

Chris is married and he and his wife, Ginger, live near the farm.

Both brother wish to thank their dad, James, for helping them get started in farming.

High Herd Milk: Steve & Jeri Ritchey, Martinsburg, 24,099 lbs. milk.

High Herd Protein: AK Mohr, New Enterprise, 785 Protein, Average/Cow.

High Cow Protein, AK Mohr, 1054 lbs. milk "Betsy" 3.3.

Lowest Somatic Cell Count: Larry & Frank Burkholder, New Enterprise, 150,000 SCC monthly average.

Ribbons-Herds, 750-849 pounds of protein.

AK Mohr, 785 lbs. protein; Steve & Jeri Ritchey, 774 lbs. protein; Paul & David Helsel, Woodbury, 752 lbs. protein.

know that are always looking for a job, they're always looking for this, they're always looking for something different, they don't like this, they don't like that? But farming is always something different. If you don't like what you're doing today, probably tomorrow is going to change."

Reinecker takes a certain pride in bucking the trends, in being different. He calls himself the "last of a dying breed" — he's an independent in an industry that is becoming almost completely vertically integrated, where producers are under contracts with feed mills, where costs are established, and where margins are small.

Each year the PPPC president markets 1,500 head of hogs mostly to Hatfield Quality Meats and to about six other regular customers, mostly small packers in the area. But Reinecker ships hogs to many towns in the region and to people who want any kind of hog. He's marketed hogs to Hanover, Carlisle, York, and auctions in Lancaster County.

Reinecker has marketed hogs to people as far away as Leesburg, Va. Those who buy spent some time as field laborers in Adams County on the many orchards. "Now they have a residential roofing business in Leesburg," he said. "They have their own company and they still come back here for my pigs." Some drive two hours or more late in the week to pick out the animal they want for the holidays.

Reinecker enjoys working with people, but what drew him into farming was the independence it provided.

"I enjoy being out, I enjoy the seasons," he said. "The variability, the change. I enjoy the growing cycles. I enjoy nature. I'm an animal person. I am a people person."

Reinecker has worked on both farms in the family. One is his father's beef farm, which includes about 160 acres of tillable land.

His father Ray finishes about 100 head of beef heifers per year. They are brought in at 400-450 pounds and taken to 1,100 pounds and sold at Lancaster County auctions.

Both farms include about 200 acres of corn, 150 acres in soybeans, 50 acres in barley, and 10 acres in hay. The feed is used for the hogs and the beef.

Reinecker makes use of a continuous-flow finishing system. He's able to do so successfully without risk of disease to the herd because he uses familiar feeder suppliers: his uncle Stan Reinecker, who uses 20 sows in York Springs, and cousin Earl Stock, who uses 80 sows in New Oxford.

Reinecker is familiar with the sow units and brings pigs in at eight weeks old weighing 45-55 pounds each.

"I sell every week, so I market them as they're ready," he said. "My building is a continuous-flow, which is contrary to the all-in/all-out technology that has been used throughout the industry."

The 100 sows produce a steady supply of feeder pigs for Reinecker to finish. Both sources vaccinate against the same swine diseases. Working closely with his sources, he can comingle the pigs in the unit. That enables Dave to work toward the niche markets that he has made.

Reinecker uses predominately purebred boars at the sow units. They use either York, Hampshire, or Duroc boars that are mated to a crossbred white sow base, mostly York/Hampshire crosses to get the blue butt, F1 pigs. Stock uses AI on about 20-30 percent of the sows and makes use of some commercial genetic stock for gilt replacement.

Reinecker gets a complement of gilts and barrows to market to his customers.

Though the PPPC president does fieldwork when necessary, if given a choice, he said he would rather work with the animals.

"I've always considered myself a nurturer of animals," he said. "It's a talent to be able to be able to look at an animal and realize what that animal is in need of."

Dave's father, Ray, purchased the home farm in 1962 when Dave was seven years old. Dave said he doesn't really remember too much of not living on the farm. His father worked as a welder for the engineering division of Bethlehem Steel. Ray had the opportunity to purchase the farm and change occupations — which he did.

"I've always had an attitude that I was bright enough to be able to do my own management," said Reinecker. "If you're not an independent, if you're on contract with somebody else, you are going to be depending on them for some portion of expertise in the swine operation. And for that you give up both our independence as well as some profit."

The conflict that Reinecker feels is evident: why pay somebody else for their knowledge when you can learn that yourself?

"Whether it's to line up marketing, whether it's to formulate feed, whether it's to purchase inputs," he said, the independent can do equally well himself. "Take any of the contractors — whatever they do, I had to do myself. And I enjoy that challenge. Why should I pay someone else to do it for me?"

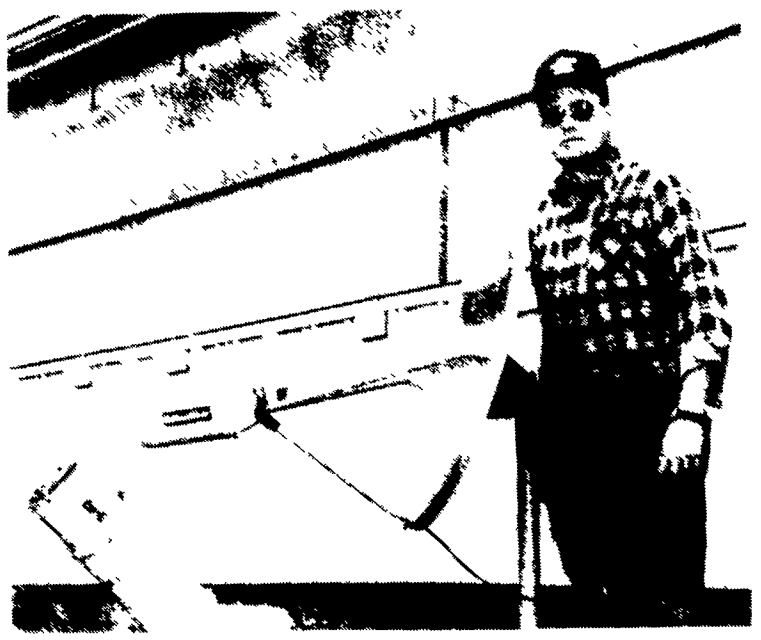
Reinecker questions the accepted belief that someone else can worry about the marketing and the price of feed. "If I had to depend on someone else to manage my business, why am I in the business? There's $5 an hour work and there's $15 an hour work — and somebody else is doing the $15 an hour work while the farmer is doing $5 an hour work."

However, Reinecker insists there is a place for contracting.

"I'm certainly not downing contracting. The way the economics of the industry are now, I don't know that I could have gotten started now, 20 years later than I did. The profit in hogs has always been thought of as being a mortgage-lifter. They have been for me as well. They still are, but it just takes a whole lot more capital to get into it. And I think that's really where contracting fits well into today's industry, into that beginning operation."

For independent producers, trying to get the best price at the worst of times is especially challenging. Reinecker remembers the turmoil in the swine industry three years ago, when the bottom dropped out of the hog market and hogs were going from 25 cents to 35 cents a pound. At the time, Reinecker was receiving only about $23.75 a pound in the fall that year. He was losing money. For the hogs sold, "I should have just stapled a $30 bill to each of their ears," he said.

(Turn to Page A21)



Dave Reinecker, new Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council (PPPC) president, talked about the importance of adapting new technology, keeping an open mind, and thinking about the future of an industry under fire. Here he looks over a DTN satellite receiver dish.

For producers to remain stable, "you have to be financially secure," he said. "You have to weather the storm."

For those who intend to stay independent, or who are left out of a contract if the contractor would go out of business, Reinecker advises producers to have the "borrowing power to be able to put hogs back in on your own. You might as well plan for that. And at least have financial backing from a lending institution to do it."

Right now, hogs are going for a base price of 46 cents a pound at base weight. Break-even price is about 45 cents, and that's for the best-managed units, according to Reinecker. If there's a glitch in the overall management strategy, producers will need to figure on a lot higher to break even.

But the swine industry continues to keep pace with the poultry industry. Producers continue to turn out 3-4 percent more meat per year. "That's a measure of true demand, when you can continue to expand an industry at profitable prices. That's what the poultry industry did virtually all during the 1980s and into the 1990s."

Reinecker, who recently returned from vacation with his family, is getting ready for the busiest time of year for independent producers.

"New Year's — that's my busiest, by far," he said. Reinecker attributes the time to the Pennsylvania Dutch craving for pork and sauerkraut at the supper table on New Year's Day. Demand increases while supply, the last week of December, gets close.

As for future expansions, Reinecker said he is limited by the acreage on the farm and that he is taking care of all he can handle without hiring extra farm labor.

Reinecker sees challenges on the horizon that every pork producer must face.

"I think the jury is still out on whether Pennsylvania wants to continue to tout ag as its number one industry," said Reinecker, "because of all the environmental regulations that are being put on farmers."

Reinecker thinks producers should take a look at what happened to farmers in Europe in the past several decades. Producers there have had to deal with increasingly stringent environmental controls. He believes the same thing could happen here.

> The profit in hogs has always been thought of as being a mortgage-lifter. They have been for me as well. They still are, but it just takes a whole lot more capital to get into it.

"We're going to drive agriculture out of the state if we're not careful in being so precise and so exact on regulations — it doesn't matter if it's dairy, beef, swine, or poultry." In the last month, the PPPC president said he has seen many agencies getting involved with agriculture.

He cannot afford to expand because of encroaching development near his farm. Recently, work began on a 68-home development that will put houses priced in the mid-$100,000 range on 37 acres near his farm. The leased land was farmed by the Reineckers until two years ago, when the owners sold it to developers who decided to build.

"Where do I go with manure?" said Reinecker. "I have injectors. I can cut down on odor that way. Would I be a good steward by designing a new operation at this location? I'm not certain. I tend to think not."

Recently, through the pork checkoff program, funding was allocated to the top hog-producing states to implement an on-farm odor assistance program. Unfortunately, Pennsylvania is not ranked in the top 10 in the country in hog production. It's ranked 12th, and the checkoff dollars are allocated to areas with the most hogs, not the most hog producers.

"Whether the odor issue is resolved in Michigan or Iowa or North Carolina . . . I mean, hogs smell relatively the same. If it controls odors in other states, it's going to control odors in Pennsylvania," he said.

Pennsylvania has about 5,000 hog producers. Any one of them can become members of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council at no cost. And all of them can benefit from the results of work by the national and state councils to promote the industry.

"I think this technology, no matter where it's developed, will help us all. Does it matter whether you are selling pork in this state or that state? What's it matter, as long as you're selling pork?"

Pork producers will make use of the technology that's developed, regardless of where it's developed, even if its developed in another country, noted Reinecker. Right now the industry is using technology on a large scale that was developed in Europe, including carcass measuring devices employed in the industry.

These issues will affect all producers — whether independent or under contract, large or small.

"Regulations are going to come down and they're going to effect every producer of every animal, whether you're large or small.

"Short-sightedness leads us to believe that this is a large-small issue. It's not. It is a pork issue, whether you're large or small."

The PPPC president intends to keep the focus of the Council's board of directors on the environmental issues.

"Forget about this large-small thing. See the advantages of being a contractor or an independent," he said.

The very definition of what a contractor is came under debate recently at the World Pork Expo. At a delegate meeting, a "contractor" was defined as "anyone that producers and manufactures feed and produces animals." Reinecker was taken aback. "Hey, I plant my corn, I grow my grain. I chop my feed," he said, gesturing with his hand. "Wait. Time out. There are thousands of 100-sow, 200-sow, 600-sow, 1,000-sow, 10,000-sow people that fit that definition. I'm not sure you can separate the big integrators from the independents that own hogs and produce feed, because I make all my feed, too."

Pennsylvania has about 5,000 hog producers. Any one of them can become members of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council at no cost. And all of them can benefit from the results of work by the national and state councils to promote the industry.

Also, how do you define a large producer? Reinecker makes the claim once voiced by someone in the industry that, if you have one more hog "than I do, you're a large producer," he said. "It's all relative."

David has been married to his wife, Cheryl, for 20 years. They have two sons: Andrew, 15, a sophomore at Bermudian Springs High School, who plans to attend college, and Jonathan, 14, a freshman also at Bermudian Springs, also planning college.

Cheryl teaches senior government and economics to all students of Bermudian Springs High School. She's been doing so for 10 years — her children will also be her students. "They have to pass her to get out of Bermudian Springs," said David.

"Mom's a tough teacher, without a doubt," he said. "Cheryl is very, very disciplined and expects a lot from her students. She demands excellence. She's very articulate and expects students to learn the highest moral and educational values that she can give them."

Reinecker takes a certain pride in bucking the trends, in being different. He calls himself the "last of a dying breed" — he's an independent in an industry that is becoming almost completely vertically integrated, where producers are under contracts with feed mills, where costs are established, and where margins are small.

The Reineckers have enforced a strict policy for their sons — no television during school weekdays. "We really do push them," he said. "Academics come first." Recreational time at home is reserved for the weekends.

David, who also serves on the Bermudian Springs School board of directors, attends Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in York Springs with his family. They serve on the youth group committee and in choir, in addition to teaching Sunday school.

This is Reinecker's second term as Pennsylvania Pork Producer Council president, elected in March this year. He served for three years for the first time in the 1980s.

"It's been one of my goals to keep all segments of the industry moving forward in the state, from the largest of our producers to the smallest," he said. "I want to keep our industry moving forward and try not to let us get distracted. Profitable, responsible stewardship, environmental and animal welfare — I think we need to be responsible in those areas as well. Producing the best product we can for the consumer. We can't lose sight of the end-user, because that's what keeps us in business."

Reinecker's advice for young producers just starting out in the industry?

"Learn, learn, read, and ask questions," he said. "Don't be caught up with paradigms. Don't put blinders on. Continue to ask questions and get involved with the pork industry. Learn as much as you can. Be a businessman — it's not just enough to know what a pig wants to eat. Get involved legislatively. Go to the Pork Forum and the World Pork Expo — every year, or at the least every other year. Go and get new technology, new ideas, and implement them. You can't do like Grandpa did. Times are changing."

Cumberland County DHIA Presents Awards

BETH MILLER
Cumberland Co.
Correspondent

HUNTSDALE (Cumberland Co.) — State Director Neil McCulloch got right to the point when he spoke during the Cumberland County Dairy Herd Improvement Association Banquet at the Penn Township Fire Hall.

"This," he said, "has been a testing year of accomplishment, as well as facing harsh realities as dairymen, as farm families and as an association."

He observed that Cumberland was one of only 15 counties in Pennsylvania that saw an increase in the number of cows enrolled in testing programs. At the same time, member equity, "the positive value of our joint effort," is approaching $500,000, McCulloch noted.

Still, he added, the state, overall, saw a 6-percent reduction in involvement.

"We the owners, member dairymen, pay for 100 percent of our top-rated lab, our 100-percent rated field service, our industry-leading processing center and our by far greater percentage of useable records," McCulloch said. "Many of our fellow Pennsylvania DHIA dairymen are no longer able or willing to pay for this quality, and seek service elsewhere. Many across the nation feel the quality and integrity of management/production information or how it is collected on the farm is no longer important.

"In 1998 and in the future we will continue to enjoy quality in our association," he concluded. "This will be the case until each of us individually casts a vote for change, not a 'yes' or 'no' vote, but the vote we cast when paying our bill with hard-earned money to the service provided we choose to do business with."

MUN analysis is just another tool to help farmers avoid "inefficient" feeding programs, he said.

The new board members chosen for the Cumberland DHIA are Harold Myers of Shippensburg and James Kulick of Carlisle.

The big winners of the awards given out during the county group's 78th anniversary banquet were Curtis and Ann Day of Shippensburg.

The Days took home the high cow in protein award with a posting of 1,327 pounds of protein for 40,050 pounds of milk. They won the high cow in milk honor with a rating of 47,256 pounds of milk and 1,290 pounds of protein.

The high 2 year-old in protein laurel went to the Days for charting of 1,047 pounds of protein for 29,661 pounds of milk, and they captured the high 2-year-old in milk with a level of 30,717 pounds of milk for 941 pounds of protein.

From the left, Cumberland County Dairy Princess Kristen Heberlig stands with Jeff and Michelle Reasner, recipients of the Cumberland County Dairy Herd Improvement Association management award, which is presented by Neal McCulloch Cumberland DHIA's state director.

From there, the Days captured the high herd in protein and milk award with ratings of 937 pounds of protein and 28,992 pounds of milk.

And, as if that wasn't enough, the Days shared the Herd Management Award with Jeff and Michelle Reasner, who also are from Shippensburg.

Meanwhile, the low herd in somatic cell count honor was won by Jet-Rae Farm of Shippensburg.

Irradiation Approved For Meat

thing, and activists propogate this fear to consumers. These activists charge that irradiation seriously depletes the nutritional value of food, introduces carcinogens, and is essentially a cover-up that allows corporations to sell previously contaminated items.

Of course, these are the same claims made prior to the common use of milk pasteurization early this century. Nevertheless, the fear of negative publicity has effectively kept food processors under the control of the opponents of irradiation.

But in the end, scientific evidence should prevail. According to the National Food Safety Database on the World Wide Web Site, studies on consumer acceptance have shown that in general a higher level of concern was expressed for preservatives and sprays than for food irradiation. "Alternative" consumers who were a vocal segment of ecologically sensitive consumers were more skeptical about the safety and advantages of the process. They also were initially more aware of food irradiation, and their concern increased after educational efforts.

After educational efforts, conventional consumers adopted a minor concerned attitude toward irradiation, but a discussion leader knowledgeable in food irradiation reduced concerns of conventional consumers compared with the impact of a non-expert leader. These researchers concluded that the attitudes of conventional consumers can be positively influenced by an educational effort, and the influence is most effective when the consumer can interact with someone knowledgeable about irradiation.

Like most perishable food products, irradiated products must still be properly refrigerated, cooked and served. Irradiation is not intended to be the total answer for assuring food safety, but it may serve as one of the processor's final quality control steps. Since it can be done after the final packaging has been completed, irradiation, when used in conjunction with proper food processing, greatly decreases the probability that foodborne pathogens will reach the consumer. However, consumers still have the responsibility to handle and prepare foods safely.

And since the label will indicate which packages of food have been irradiated, the consumer will have the choice to buy or not to buy irradiated food.

THE LANCASTER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY

Chamber Articles Begin

When people think of a Chamber of Commerce, they have visions of large manufacturers working together to improve their profitability. So why would The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry be included in an agricultural publication? The answer is the recognition of agriculture as the foundation for a strong economy in Pennsylvania.

The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry is a non-profit, member organization comprised of businesses that come together to improve the quality of Lancaster County's business environment. The Chamber is not a department of the city, county or state government, which is a common misconception about the Chamberís affiliation.

The combination of active volunteers, staff and community organizations enable the Chamber to accomplish more for its members than these groups could accomplish individually. Its mission is to meet the collective needs of the membership and enhance a viable business climate for Lancaster County, which includes the strong agricultural industry.

Let me relate the situation for the Chamber. Lancaster County's agriculture covers almost 400,000 acres, or in other words, two-thirds of the total land area in the county is devoted to farming. With over $835 million in total sales revenue, Lancaster's agriculture has an enormous economic impact on the non-farm population.

Farming creates 47 jobs for each $1 million of agricultural product sales, and the county's agriculture is a major attraction for the tourist industry. Thus, agriculture is an important part of Lancaster County's three pronged economy - manufacturing, tourism, and agriculture. This careful balance has kept our economy strong.

In 1989 the Chamberís Agriculture Committee proposed the establishment of an Agriculture Services Manager within The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce of Commerce and Industry. This was a visionary step and was the first such position in the United States. The position is designed to serve as a focal point for Lancaster's agriculture. The purpose is to enhance a farmer's economic welfare while providing additional benefits to the entire agricultural related business community.

The Agriculture Services program is guided by a group of volunteers with equal representation for production farming, agribusiness and agri-finance. We sponsor programs ranging from farm finance seminars to agriculture education events and monitor legislation that could impact Pennsylvaniaís agriculture community. We also attempt to bring agricultural groups together to work toward common goals.

To give a personal introduction, I was raised on a small farm on the eastern part of Lancaster County. After graduating from Penn State University, I worked for the Lancaster County Conservation District, and for the past three years I have been employed as the Agriculture Services Manager for The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

I am currently on the board of the Penn State Agricultural, the PA FFA Foundation, and the Lancaster Farmland Trust. I also serve on the Lancaster County Conservation District as an Associate Director, the Caernarvon Township Planning Commission and chair the International Commerce Committee of the Chamber.

With this column we hope to share some of our perspectives on how farmers and businesses work together to create a strong and sustainable agriculture economy for generations to follow. We encourage you to learn more about your local chambers and find out how they could become a tremendous resource for your farm.

Finally, we hope you enjoy this column and look forward to its monthly appearance. In the near future, we will discuss such important issues as neighbor relations strategies, zoning and agriculture, tax reform in agriculture, and developing your farmís strategic business plan.

Feel free to send your comments and ideas by email to Jim Shirk at the Chamber at HYPER-LINK Mail to: jshirk@lcci.com or call him at 717-397-3531.

FULLTIME™ HAS TOP HERD WORKING OVERTIME.

Five years ago, Jacob Tanis believed "corn silage is corn silage," recalls Russ Judy, his Young's nutritionist Then Tanis of Centre Hall, PA, tried Cargill FQ silage hybrids and increased milk production by 6,000 pounds per cow over a four-year period Now he's taken another step to higher-quality feed with FullTime™ forage from Cargill

Thanks to feeding high-quality silage and other good management practices, the Tanis herd last year was the state's top milk-producing herd, with a herd average of 31,393 pounds, according to DHIA data and was rated the highest for type in its size range by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association[1]

When Judy suggested that Tanis try new Cargill FullTime forage, he was receptive He was sold on Cargill hybrids and he trusted Judy's judgment

Tanis gives Judy a lot of credit for his success with FullTime forage. "Russ does a good job of helping me feed my herd," Tanis says

His confidence proved well-founded in 1996. Tanis saw a milk production increase of 6 pounds per cow per day with 96 cows on test with FullTime forage. There also was a noticeable improvement in the body condition of the cows, Tanis says.

Tanis planted 10 acres of FullTime forage in 1996, 20 acres in 1997 and intends to plant 30 to 35 acres next year

This year, FullTime forage yielded as well as – or better than – other silage corn despite extremely dry weather, Tanis says He estimates production at 15 to 20 tons per acre

"FullTime forage can give top returns with best management practices, and obviously Mr Tanis gave it close attention," comments Dan Froehlich, Cargill agronomic services manager

Dr Froehlich recommends that dairymen plant FullTime forage after soils have thoroughly warmed up "You should expect late-season growth spurts with FullTime, so be sure there's plenty of nitrogen available, perhaps by side-dressing And be sure to plan harvesting based strictly on percent moisture content – 66 to 70 percent for bunker silos," he advises

"I'm extremely pleased with FullTime forage I've never fed silage that I could get as much milk out of," Tanis says. "I would recommend it to any producer who wants to produce milk cost-effectively"

FullTime™ clocks 7.2-lb. increase in MSU study.
The big difference between FullTime™ forage and conventional corn hybrids is their relative level of digestible fiber. Digestible fiber is a primary factor influencing milk production FullTime forage contains nearly 40 percent less indigestible lignin Cows fed diets containing this new forage product consumed more dry matter and produced more milk In two university studies,[2] cows fed FullTime forage consumed up to 8 percent more dry matter and produced up to 72 more pounds of milk per day. And body condition scores were maintained or improved.

Maybe it's time you took a closer look. Cows that consumed FullTime forage in a high-forage diet produced as much as or more fat-corrected milk than cows on normal corn silage in a high-grain diet, says Ed Nimtz, Cargill forage product manager "We believe dairymen like Jake Tanis will demonstrate to the industry that FullTime can increase your income per acre by increasing the amount of milk you get per pound of feed FullTime forage, when properly managed, has the potential for a 5 to 1 return on investment Even a one-pound increase in milk production will cover the increased investment for FullTime forage," Nimtz says

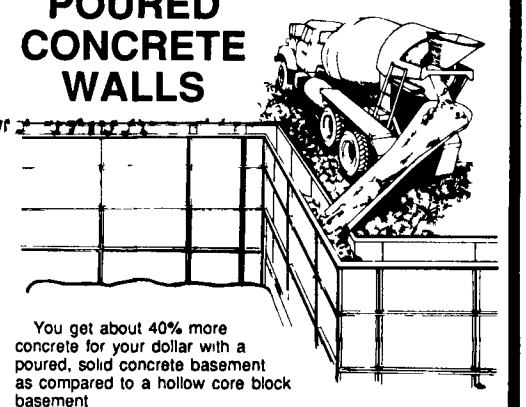
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:

• Manure Pit Walls
• Hog House Walls
• Barnyard Walls
• Chicken House Walls
• Retaining Walls
• House Foundation Walls

Dairy Situation And Outlook

Dairy Marketing and Policy Specialist
University of Wisconsin Cooperative Extension-Madison

October milk production for the 20 reporting states was up 1.8% from a year ago, the result of 0.7% fewer milk cows and 2.5% more milk per cow. Milk production for June through August was running more than 4% higher than a year ago, but increases are now around 2% and increases for the final two months of the year will likely be less than 2% as well.

This is because milk production was rebounding from its lows last year at this time. Accumulated milk production from January through October was 1.8% higher than a year ago, but on a daily comparison, it was 2.5% higher (1996 was leap year).

For October, of the five leading dairy states, Wisconsin and Minnesota continue to report milk cow numbers down substantially from a year ago, 2.8% and 2.5% respectively. Milk cow numbers are less than 1% lower for New York and Pennsylvania, but 3.6% higher in California indicating some return to herd expansions in that state.

Increases in milk per cow were above average for Wisconsin, 3.5%, but just .8% for Minnesota, 1.9% for New York, 3.7% for Pennsylvania and 2.3% for California. The changes in total milk production from a year ago were; Wisconsin 0.6%, Minnesota -1.8%, New York 1.5%, Pennsylvania 2.9%, and California 6.0%.

In the northwest and southwest, Idaho and New Mexico continue to show strong increases in milk production with October production 8.4% and 8.2% respectively higher than a year ago, the result of continued expansion in milk cow numbers and normal increases in milk per cow. While Arizona had 3.2% more milk cows, a decline in milk per cow of 1.5% held the increase in total milk to 1.5%. But Washington experienced 1.5% fewer milk cows, .6% less milk per cow and a 2.2% decline in total milk production. Texas also experienced a decline in both milk cow numbers, -2.0% and milk per cow, -3.0%,.

In the south and southeast, for Florida, a decline in milk per cow of 5.6% more than offset the 2.6% more milk cows, netting a decline in total milk of 3.3%.Total milk production was also down 2.6% in Kentucky and 4.1% in Missouri. But recent reports indicate milk production in these parts are improving seasonally and less milk needs to be imported to meet fluid milk needs.

In the west much of the increased milk production is utilized to make cheese. September cheese production for the nation was up 4.6% from a year ago, and up 2.2% thus far for the year. In comparison, September cheese production in California was up 23.3% from a year ago. For the first time ever, total cheese production in the west (California, Idaho, Colorado, and Arizona) exceeded production in the East North Central Region (Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio, Illinois, and Indiana).

Cheese sales on the other hand, have been sluggish. January through September sales were up just .8% from American cheese, but up 3.1% for other cheese varieties. The result of slow sales and continued increase in cheese production, American cheese stocks totaled 422.9 million pounds the end of September, 14% higher than a year ago.

Mercantile Exchange (CME) the price of 40 pound cheddar blocks have held good since August 7 of this year, $1.39 per pound or higher. In fact, as of November 13, 40 pound cheddar blocks had increased 1 1/4 cents per pound for the month to $1.41 per pound. This was some what surprising given the stock and production levels. Cheddar barrels, on the other hand have shown some softness.

Barrels had peaked at $1.3625 per pound on October 16 and as November 13 they were down to $1.3275 per pound.

Butter prices have shown unusual price movements. On October AA butter prices increased $.58 per pound to $1.95. The following week, October 30, they fell $.375 cents per pound to $1.575.

Then on November 14, they increased again by $.025 per pound to $1.60. As of September 30, butter stocks totaled 30.7 million pounds, 43% more than a year ago, but a year ago, stocks were at critically low levels. DEIP sales of butter have kept butter stocks tight this year. Further, September butter production was down 2.1% from a year ago and down .2% for the January through September period. But higher prices have dampened sales. January through September butter sales were down 5.4%.

Nevertheless, less butter production, fairly tight stocks and the up coming expected strong holiday demand is keeping butter prices high. We can expect a significant drop in prices once the holiday demand is filled.

Nonfat dry milk prices are around the $1.05 per pound, near the support price. Not as much nonfat dry milk is being used this year to fortify milk for cheese production. As a result, nonfat dry milk sales are down 13.5%.

What does this all mean for farm level milk prices? The October BFP increased just $.04 per hundredweight to $12.83. Some predict that this may be the peak for the year. I could see no change to perhaps a nickel increase in the BFP for November. The high butter prices have the impact of lowering the 3.5% base month price (October price) because of a relatively high butterfat adjustment. But if the $.0125 increase in the CME 40 pound block cheese price holds and gets translated to a similar increase in the November monthly average NASS cheese price, this would have a positive impact on the November BFP. So what ever way you look at it, it does not appear that the November BFP will not differ greatly from the October $12.83 price.

Looking beyond and into 1998, we can expect a rather major decline in butter prices and some decline in cheese prices. The December BFP will likely decline to near $12.00 and drop below $12.00 early in 1998.

A Bit Of Dairy History Recorded

These photographs were found in a children's encyclopedia called THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE, with copyrights of 1874 to 1918 by the Grolier Society in New York, and The Educational Book Co. in London. See "Learning From History" editorial on page A10 for background.

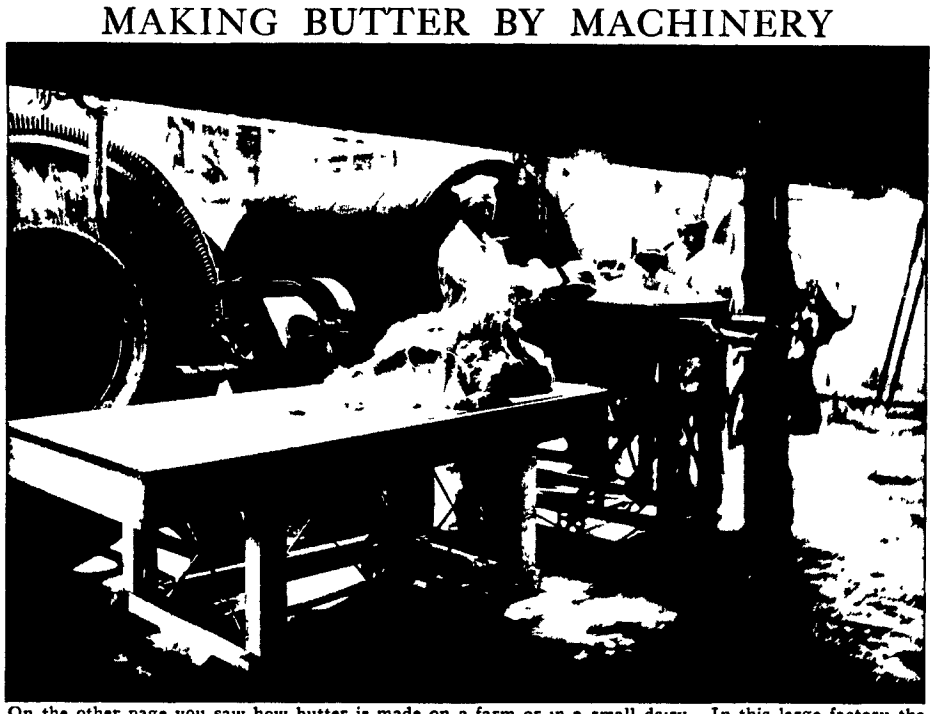
WHERE THE BUTTER COMES FROM

Copyright by Underwood & Underwood, New York.
After bread comes butter, which we get from the milk of the cow. This picture shows the interior of a model dairy barn which holds fifty cows. Every effort is made to keep the milk clean.. The barn is light, the floor is of cement, which is kept clean by a hose; the cows are brushed and washed every day, and the men wear special suits of white duck which are put on at milking time and kept for that work only.

After the cream has stood for some time it is put into a churn. This is turned round and round until the butter forms in grains of fat. It is not yet allowed to form a solid mass. Water and salt are added to get rid of anything which might make the butter sour.

After the churning and the washing and soaking the butter is placed in brine for a quarter of an hour, and then comes out, as we see here, in small grains to be rolled. Each of these particles is butter, but it would not long keep sweet and pure in this condition.

MAKING BUTTER BY MACHINERY



On the other page you saw how butter is made on a farm or in a small dairy. In this large factory the cream is first pasteurized, and then is run into the great churns which break up the fat globules and collect them as butter. The moisture is worked out by machinery, the butter is removed from the churns and then goes to the next room to be packed for market.

The butter must be made into prints by hand. The moulds are filled from the great mound of butter on the table, and the blocks are weighed and wrapped in parchment paper. They are then packed in boxes and taken to the cooling room to become thoroughly chilled. Unless this is done, it cannot be shipped. Pictures by Brown Bros.

Smithmyer Named Leadership Fellow

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. — Crystal M. Smithmyer of Patton, Pa., is one of 38 individuals selected by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation for Group XVI of its Kellogg National Leadership Program.

The program began in 1980 to help the nation expend its pool of capable leaders. It is structured to increase individuals' skills and insights into areas outside their chosen disciplines, which will allow them to more creatively and effectively address society's challenges.

As executive director of the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives, Smithmyer is responsible for the administration and management of educational and leadership development programs targeting a variety of agricultural and regional cooperative audiences.

Smithmyer is a founder of the Penn State chapter of the Sigma Alpha Agricultural Sorority. She also organized a donation of more than 100 dozen ears of sweet corn for distribution to an inner-city Philadelphia urban garden project. In conjunction with this effort, she conducted canning and preserving demonstrations.

Smithmyer received the William Hlushko Award to Young Cooperative Educators from the Association of Cooperative Educators.

The 1997 Kellogg National Leadership Program (KNLP) Group XVI members were selected from a field of 747 applicants. Their applications detailed professional and personal accomplishments and stated future goals, including self-designed plans to expand and apply their knowledge in chosen areas.

The Kellogg Foundation received applications from faculty and administrators at educational institutions and academic centers, as well as from government, business, industry, and the human services sector.

Crystal M. Smithmyer

"KNLP brings together a diverse group of motivated citizens in a three-year leadership development program," said William C. Richardson, president and CEO of the W.K. Kellogg Foundation. "The program encourages the formation of creative, flexible decision makers prepared to take on the leadership challenges of the next century."

Good Things Come In Threes

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

ATGLEN (Chester Co.) — Good things seem to come in threes, and for a Chester County dairy farm family of three, that old saying seemed to ring true this week.

The north Chester County dairyman said he was surprised Nov. 30 when one of his better registered Holsteins delivered triplets.

Rodney Bare, who crops 120 acres and milks 80 head of registered Holsteins at his Swan Road Holsteins farm near Atglen, said he was surprised early Sunday when his 82-point Swan Road Merril Petunia cow gave birth to twins — unfortunately both bulls.

However, his cow did well in starting her second lactation, after recording a first 305-day lactation record of 19,134 pounds milk, with 4.2 percent fat and 3.2 percent protein. Her first calf was also a bull.

He said she appeared to be doing well, and the calves were doing well, and he and his wife Faith and their 7-month-old son Seth, went to church.

Instead of returning to the farm directly after church, they went to visit with his parents.

He said he when he was back in the barn, about 3 p.m. that day, he noticed his Petunia cow was pushing again.

"I couldn't believe it," he said, "and then she had the third one!"

The last one was a heifer, the biggest of the trio of calves, each with an upside-down white triangular patch on the forehead.

While acknowledging that multiple births are not really desired, because in cows it often results in sterile females, it isn't a foregone conclusion.

Rodney said he wasn't sure whether or not he was going to keep the heifer for the herd, though he would like to because the calves were sired by PenCol Duster, a fairly well known artificial insemination bull.

The bulls most likely will be sent to Vintage Livestock Auction, for sale, as he does with most of his bull calves.

However, since they were all somewhat small at birth, they've been gaining size and weight quickly and all received colostrum early, he said.

Rodney and Faith, who keeps the farm books and works at her parents' business in Willow Street, have been farming since they married and purchased the herd from his father, Harold Bare, in March 1994. Rodney had 30 head of his own prior to buying the rest from his father.

They use a freestall facility for their 80 milk cows, which have a rolling herd average of more than 23,000 pounds of milk. Rodney milks in a double-four parlor.

In addition to his father, Rodney's uncle, Hershey Bare of Lebanon until recently was an active dairy farmer. Hershey is a well-known in Lebanon County for his community work, involvement with the Lebanon Area Chamber of Commerce, and dairy promotion efforts, including opening up his farm to many tours. Hershey was recently elected to the Lebanon County Extension board of directors.

Rodney said he also has a cousin who farms in Bridgeport area in Lancaster County.

Rodney also reported success on opening day of antlered deer season with a six-point buck taken from an upstate hunting spot. That's a three-point buck, by Western count.

Mifflin County Conservation District Presents Awards

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — "They have their priorities right."

That's the way Mifflin County Conservation District chairman James Hostetter described the winners of the Cooperator of the Year Award.

The Earnest and Sherri Meily family from Wayne Township earned the respect of the conservation district board by putting forth extra effort to practice conservation while working hard to establish a farm.

Hostetter presented the award at the Conservation Celebration Banquet recently at the Belleville Community Hall.

The Meilys operate a 200-acre crop and hog farm. They practice strip cropping and conservation tillage. They've installed grass waterways, subsurface drainage, and two manure storage systems in addition to numerous other conservation practices.

In other awards, Jim Hostetter accepted a Director of Attendance Award for placing third in the state for attendance. Jeremy Freed accepted a monetary gift to be used toward FFA conservation activites. Girl Scout leader Mary Smith and Boy Scout leader Dave Anderson accepted the same on behalf of their organizations. The Goodyear Award went to the Francis Uhland family of Ferguson Valley who were last year's Cooperator of the Year.

Featured speaker Dr. Robert Steele, Dean of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, spoke of the continued need for the land grant system, including the Extension Service. Penn State was established 130 years ago as a land grant university. Cooperative extension was established in the early 1900s. Both were formed to educate and inform the public.

"Some feel the land grant university, including the Cooperative Extension Service and ag research, are not needed," Steele said. "Based on our successes over the past 100 years and successes we need over the next 100 years, we do need them. But we need to make changes.

Steele said man will always need energy from food. As the population continues to double at a faster rate, universities need to find a way to extract energy to survive...and to produce more and more food on less and less arable land.

"We need better technology, creative and clever solutions in an efficient and responsible manner. How? We invest in young people. That's what the land grant system is about. We need to make education affordable and accessible while not compromising quality."

Final Call For Ace Expo

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If you want to learn how technology can help your farm prosper into the next millenium, sign up now for ACE Expot '97!

Registrations are still being accepted for the Ag Computing and Electronics Expo, scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 17, at the Holiday Inn Lancaster Host, Lancaster, Pa. Nowhere else will you find such a smorgasbord of information targeted to making your business more profitable. To see the complete program check out the ACE Expo web site at http://aginfo.psu.edu/ace; or contact your county extension office.

This show isn't a pie-in-the-sky look at toys and gizmos. It's about practical applications of available and emerging technologies to make your farm more profitable and efficient. Several sessions are geared toward beginning computer users. Others will help experienced users gain more from their investment.

Learn how dairy farmers use technology to milk more profit, and what farmers glean from the Internet. Discover how precision agriculture will change the way you farm, and how several Mid-Atlantic farmers are already making that transition. Other sessions will cover financial management, fruit, vegetables, on-farm security, nutrient management and more! A trade show will feature more than 20 companies offering the latest in computing, precision and communications technology for the farm.

Registration is $79; bring your spouse along for $69. Lunch and printed proceedings are included in the registration fee. Call Pennsylvania Farmer Associate Editor Kim Bower-Spence at (717) 752-0565 to register. Brochures are available at county extension offices.

The Holiday Inn Lancaster Host is located at 2300 Lincoln Highway East (Route 30), east of Lancaster. Make room reservations directly with the Host by calling (717) 299-5500. Tell them you're with ACE Expo for a special conference rate of $69 for a single or double room.

N = Neon "pigtail" bulb (Radio Shack, 98 cents)

R-1 = ¼ watt 40,000 ohm resistor (Radio Shack)

Gr = round Rod

S = 8-32 screw and nut, preferably brass

The job takes about an hour.

Start by drilling a small hole in the reflector to pass through the wire going from R-1 to the ground rod. Drill another hole in the flashlight bulb holder (having discarded the flashlight bulb), and solder one end of the neon pigtail to it. Then bolt it to the aluminum plate (after you have created the bend in the plate shown). Bend will hang over the charged wire. Hang the plate over a fence wire (charged wire), and drive in the ground rod. It requires no maintenance. The neon bulb has a life of over 10,000 hours. The purpose of R-1, the resistor, is to lower the current draw of the neon bulb. If you can't find a 40,000 ohm resistor, use two 20,000 ohm tied in series. Because the lamp and resistor weigh so little, it is not necessary to create a support inside the reflector — the wires will be strong enough to hold them in place. You may wish to use some caulk where the reflector meets its plastic holder, and also around the joint where the screw passes through plate PL. Makes a nice gift for a friend too.

Pa.DHIA Announces 1998 District Director Meetings

DAVID BIGELOW
Training Coordinator

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The district meetings for local directors of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association have been planned to be held during January and February.

There are 11 meetings scheduled for around the state, corresponding to the 11 director districts. These meetings are held every year primarily for directors of local DHIA committee/boards.

It is an opportunity for directors and management to get together for discussion of issues and developments affecting DHIA members statewide.

Election of directors to the state board is also done at the meetings.

Anyone interested in attending the meeting in their district should contact their county committee or local board.

The meetings are to be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the dates and at the places scheduled.

Industry Reduces Drift

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The ag industry is working to reduce spray drift by developing a national education program targeted at applicators and other decision makers, according to Paul Kindinger, ARA's president and CEO, and Rick Stanton, Valent USA Corp.

Kindinger and Stanton updated ag retailers at the Agricultural Retailers Association's 5th annual Convention & Expo about the National Coalition to Minimize Spray Drifts and the Spray Drift Task Force (SDTF)'s activities and future plans to help in the education effort.

Stanton explained that SDTF was formed by manufacturers to work with the EPA as regulatory criteria are developed for spray drift.

The Coalition is made up of federal agencies, associations, crop protectant manufacturers, university PAT coordinators, representatives of the insurance industry and state regulators.

Since its inception in 1995, the Drift Minimization Coalition has pulled together stakeholders and reviewed the drift data and findings of the SDTF. The Coalition has also developed a vision of "ideal" behavioral goals, a consensus definition for drift and buffer zones, a suggested curriculum for spray drift for all educational programs and the first module in a three-part educational series for retailers.

Pennsylvania Dairy Futures Conference Comes To State College

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Dairy producers, processors, distributors and other professionals in dairy-related businesses can get a glimpse into the economic future of the dairy industry at the 1997 Pennsylvania Dairy Futures Conference, Dec. 10-11 at the Days Inn Penn State in State College.

The two-day program begins at 11:30 a.m. with a luncheon, followed by a series of presentations from dairy experts. Bill Eby, editor of the Kiplinger Agricultural Newsletter, will talk on "Dairy Policy in the New Millennium — A View from Washington." Robert Yonkers, assistant professor of agricultural economics in Penn State's College of Agriculture Sciences, will speak on "State and National Trends and Tools for Risk Management."

The individual presentations will be followed by mini-profiles of successful Pennsylvania dairy producers, and by a brief annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, a newly formed group that is sponsoring the conference. Other sponsors include Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, the Pennsylvania Chamber of Business and Industry. After dinner, David Hettinga, vice president of corporate research for Land O'Lakes, Inc. will speak on "Designing Future Dairy Products."

On December 11, the conference will open with remarks by Samuel E. Hayes, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture, followed by two presentations by dairy experts. The first presentation, "Food Industry Trends: Evolution and Revolution," features John Lord, chair of the Department of Food and Marketing in the College of Business Administration at St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia. The final speaker will be Monte Hemenover, director of industry affairs for Protiva, a division of Monsanto. His topic is "A Prospective on the Future of the Dairy Industry."

The registration fee is $85 and checks should be made payable to PA Dairy Stakeholders. Checks and completed registration forms should be mailed to N. Alan Bair, Penn State Harrisburg, 777 West Harrisburg Pike, Middletown, PA 17057. For further information or to receive a registration form, call Alan Bair at (717) 948-6328. Rooms are being held at the Days Inn Penn State. Call (800) 325-2525 to make a room reservation.

PMMB Hears Testimony On Class I Premium

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — It was only mid-October that the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) held a special hearing and meeting to consider changing the state's over-order premium on fluid milk because of drought and continued low dairy prices received at the farm.

This week the PMMB held another special hearing to consider implementing a statewide Class I milk price to offset a possible national dairy price crisis resulting from a recent federal district court judge's ruling in a civil suit about how the United States agriculture secretary establish the price of drinking milk in 1992.

Backtracking a little to the mid-October action by the PMMB, a 40-cent per hundredweight (cwt.) of milk premium increase was approved by the PMMB in a follow-up public meeting, to provide Pennsylvania producers whose milk is produced, processed and retailed as drinking milk within Pennsylvania with a total of an extra $1.20 premium per cwt. of their milk actually sold as drinking milk.

That premium increase was approved because the state's dairy producers have been suffering badly from drought, crop damage, high feed costs, and a somewhat suspect severe decline in dairy prices.

Without a doubt, the effect and purpose of the narrowly applied PMMB premium is to benefit Pennsylvania consumers by ensuring that they will always have locally available drinking milk.

The way it does this is by attempting to ensure marginal profitability of Pennsylvania dairy producers and processors of drinking milks.

These premiums are not significant as enticements to enter or expand dairy business.

It is generally understood that, from a business standpoint, the premium benefits producers and processors who are in the business as much, if not more, out of a love for it than for its profits.

The premium is intended to help them tread water during periods of economic hardships, instead of succumbing to bankruptcy and leaving the state's fresh milk supply up to surviving out-of-state or instate monopolistic corporate interests.

The goal of the PMMB is stability of the dairy industry, so as to assure a consistent, safe and inexpensive milk supply for an indefinite time to all Pennsylvanians, rural and urban.

The danger in allowing the instate producers and processer to fail because of temporary price instability is that it would seriously risk the availability and affordability of fresh drinking milk in many out-of-the way areas.

With the largest rural population in the nation, Pennsylvania still has many out-of-the way areas.

Any fresh milk supplier to Pennsylvania, without a vested interest in the local community, presents a risk to that local community's ability to receive fresh milk.

A non-local dairy products provider, operating strictly from bottom-line profit motivations, could well find that long-distance hauling of drinking milk into rural Pennsylvania not worth the effort.

History shows that consolidated, downsized businesses cut out marginally profitable routes, or raise the price to consumers to cover the higher cost of hauling smaller quantities longer distances.

That's nothing but common sense, as well as modern business practice.

Pennsylvania consumers, especially those in the low-income rural areas, could likely lose their local fresh milk supply.

But, the PMMB not only has the authority to establish a premium. It also has the authority to establish a statewide Class I price.

On Tuesday this week, the dairy industry of Pennsylvania told the PMMB to use that authority.

The PMMB is expected to soon announce a date for a public meeting to consider and act upon the testimony.

That meeting is expected to be held near or before mid-month.

The state dairy industry's request of the PMMB this week: Set a statewide Class I price that is equivalent to what it would be under regular pricing calculations by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

For those not familiar with the current United States dairy crisis, on Nov. 3 a federal district court judge in Minnesota ruled that the USDA's setting of Class I differentials (in effect a premium for drinking milk) is illegal in 28 federal milk marketing orders.

The effect of that ruling would mean that dairy producers would receive a lot less for their milk; much less than it cost to produce.

It is widely agreed that a great percentage of family-dairy farms in Pennsylvania would most likely be wiped out quickly and permanently under the judge's ruling.

The predicament is the same in other states. Only Pennsylvania, with the PMMB, has the administrative tools and authority to prevent chaos and an implosion of the dairy industry.

In effort to prevent a national calamity, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman requested a stay of the federal court judge's order, which would at least nulify the ruling until an official appeal could be heard.

A hearing on Glickman's request for a stay was scheduled to be held after presstime Friday, Dec. 5.

PMMB Opponents Relatively Quiet Lately

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Political pressure and support to tear down all government commodity support programs appears to be declining.

Especially with regards to the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB).

With dairy prices received by farmers running from mostly below- to at-farm production cost levels, and the only thing coming between disaster and survival for many dairy farmers being a request by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman for a stay of the Nov. 3 judgement of a Minnesota federal district court judge, political efforts in the state to gut the PMMB recently have been mostly quiet.

In fact, if nothing else, the recent decision by the federal district court judge — that Class I differentials in 28 federal milk marketing orders are illegal, and therefore buyers don't have to pay extra to farmers for milk used for Class I purposes — has brought a renewed national spotlight upon the PMMB.

A growing number of other states have begun looking into developing their own milk marketing boards to establish their own Class I over-order premiums.

In fact, the Land O'Lakes Cooperative recently testified before the New Jersey Division of Dairy and Commodity Regulation that it is requesting the Pennsylvania neighbor to create its own version of the PMMB.

And quickly.

For independent dairy producers and processors, this can be expected to be good news.

While it doesn't mean that the market can take an oversupply of dairy product without further reducing the value of the commodity, it does mean it is less likely that some in the industry will be able to eliminate completely government influence on milk prices and quality.

What the recent federal dairy pricing crisis demonstrates is that, if Pennsylvania didn't have the PMMB, it wouldn't have any mechanism for dealing with the effects of the federal court's ruling.

Without the PMMB, the dairy industry in Pennsylvania would be much more vunerable to a complete takeover by a corporate force.

As many have noticed, and others are beginning to discover, competition within many day-to-day public service industries has not increased, but decreased with the loss of some governmental oversight.

Short term, predatory price cutting by deep-pocketed coporations can quickly eliminate most independent competition.

Especially in production industries that require substantial overhead and are characterized by low profit margins and many, but small independent businesses, there have been many examples of how a large, deep-pocketed corporations have been able to enter the field of business, force bankruptcy level wholesale and retail prices, and sit back and outlast the smaller competitors.

A recent article in the Wall Street Journal commented on the phenomenon.

According to an article in the Dec. 4 edition of the Journal, staff reporter Timothy Aeppel wrote about how, in the face of an already saturated market for their product, that leaders of businesses apparently continue to keep expanding their production, until there is only one left standing.

"But if people know this will happen," he wrote, "why keep building?

"Call it the psychology of overcapacity. The fact is that most top executive are well aware of impending gluts in their industries, but many are hping they will emerge as one of the winners after the inevitable bloodbath."

He went on to state that it is his finding that some of the reason for this self-destructive behavior is because people apparently like to play follow-the-leader.

"Part of it is herd behavior. Everyone else is expanding, so you do it too," Aeppel wrote. "But there are also good reason to think that what you're building is essential to your survival."

In his article, Aeppel cites business leaders who state that it has become the ethic of modern business to keep growing until there is only one provider left remaining.

That sensibility in business has been creeping into agriculture, down from the large international agricultural giants to the local and regional businesses, and to farmers.

For the dairy industry, the affect of that sense of business may ultimately cause the loss of local control and production of dairy foods, as has happened in the poultry, beef and pork industries.

In fact the dairy industry doesn't seem to be too far behind those other industries in how the production/processing/delivery system has evolved.

For a variety of reasons, local butchers and slaughterhouses and producers have been largely locked out of the business of delivering local product.

However, with the authority and support of the PMMB, local dairy production, processing and retail can be expected to have a foothold in Pennsylvania.

PMMB using its authority to temporarily maintain the price of milk paid to farmers.

Though not included in the testimony presented this week, it had been observed by some that should the PMMB use its authority in setting the price paid to Pennsylvania farmers higher than surrounding states, that instate milk buyers would purchase milk from outside of the state. That it would come gushing in.

However, that scenario fails to account for the fact that the signficantly below-production price that would be paid for milk under the judge's ruling can be expected to somewhat quickly threaten failure of any out-of-state drinking milk provider, much less one that must haul the milk long-distances.

The Tuesday hearing of the PMMB was requested by Land O'Lakes Inc dairy cooperative..

Dennis Schad, representing not only Land O' Lakes, but the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Cooperative, the Coastal Region of Mid-American Dairymen, and the Eastern Region of Milk Marketing Inc., told the PMMB to set the Class I price for the state so that, in effect, it would nullify the judge's ruling.

"Together these cooperatives ... market the milk of more than 40 percent of the state's total dairy producers," he said.

"The Notice of Hearing declares the purpose of this emergency hearing shall be to receive evidence, concerning whether the (PMMB) shall set Class I prices in five of the six state Milk Marketing Areas," Schad noted.

"On Nov. 3, Judge Doty in the Minnesota Federal District Court ruled on a case brought by the Minnesota Milk Producers' Association. That producer group sued the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture over his decision from the 1992 Class I differential hearings.

"As a result of that ruling, Class I differentials in 28 federal orders, including the New York-New Jersey (Federal Order 2); the Middelt Atlantic (F.O.4); and the Eastern Ohio-Western Pennsylvania (F.O.36) orders were ruled illegal and the (U.S.) secretary (of agriculture) is enjoined from enforcing those differentials."

Schad outlined the process by which the Class I prices in federal orders are calculated.

He was speaking to a group already familiar with the somewhat complicated and contrived machinations that are used to determine minimum prices for milk.

For those not as familiar, it should be explained that a farmer receives payment for his milk depending on how the buyer of his milk used it, and how much of it got used that way.

The federal government recognizes three basic classes of uses for milk — drinking milk would be Class I; ice cream and cheese would be Class II; and manufacturing uses, such as in secondary ingredients in other food processing, as Class III.

All the different uses of milk and all the different products that are produced from it varies from month to month.

When farmers sell their milk to a processor, the processor uses it and then pays the farmers who supplied it based on how he used it.

Some processors mainly make and sell drinking milk. The farmers supplying them get the most money for their milk.

Some processors mainly make dairy products, such as butter, powdered milk, or cheeses. Those farmers don't get as much for their milk.

Some processors use the milk for a variety of products, depending on marketing needs.

The individual paychecks then are based on how much of the milk got used for the different products. The USDA sets the minimum prices for the milk use, according to where it is used.

Farmers generally pay for hauling their milk to market, and they also pay for other costs, such as supporting local, regional and national dairy promotions ('Got Milk?' campaign, for example).

Depending on the tested quality of their milk, farmers' can also receive either a deduction or a reward.

Then, there can be other premiums and adjustments added to their paycheck, such as the $1.20 per cwt. the PMMB currently has in effect to boost Pennsylvania dairy producers whose milk is processed and sold within state lines.

In collectives, such as cooperatives, members receive pay based on the overall uses of its members' milk. (They also currently divide the premiums and deductions.)

In his addressing the PMMB, Schad explained that the USDA sets Class I prices by using a fixed differential that is added upon the second previous month's Basic Formula Price (BFP).

(The BFP is the bottom line price based on a formula that takes into account production costs and market prices of dairy products.)

For an example, he said the Class I differential in F.O.4 is $3.03, $2.00 in F.O.36, and $2.42 at the 201-mile to 210-mile zone in F.O.2.

"Thus, the effect of Judge Doty's ruling is that the minimum Novemeber Class I price in the three federal orders ... will be only September's Basic Formula Price, $12.79 per cwt.

"Assuming a 50-percent Class I utilization in the three orders, the estimated effect to Pennsylvania dairy farmers will be (an) about $1.20 per cwt. (loss)."

The PMMB manages the state by considering it as six different areas. The Class I differential is different in each.

Schad explained that since the PMMB Area 6 region apparently would not be affected by the judge's ruling, nothing more needs to be done with the price of Class I milk, there.

However, for the other five areas, Schad recommended that each have the Class I price set to cover the loss of the differentials.

Schad also said that the price setting be implemented for November and December this year only, for now.

"... Land O' Lakes et al fully understands and appreciates the disorderly marketing which would result from a (PMMB)-mandated enhancement of Class I prices, absent a mechanism to pool the proceeds among the dairy farmers of the commonwealth.

"For this for reason, Land O' Lakes et al request the board set the Class I prices in Areas I through 5 for only two months, so that proponents can come to the board on Dec. 16 and 17 with a pooling proposal.

Testimony supporting and reiterating the Land O' Lakes position came from the Pennsylvania State Grange, and the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Other interested parties included the staff of the PMMB, the Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers, and National Farmers Organization Inc.

Also presenting testimony was long-time, perennial PMMB opponent Thomas Finucane, a Chambersburg attorney.

In other related dairy news, Land O' Lakes also has been involved with efforts to bring stability and parity to dairy prices received in the entire region.

Land O'Lakes testified recently before the New Jersey Division of Dairy Commodity Regulation that it was requesting that the state set up a Class I over-order premium similar to the program Pennsylvania has with the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board.

Wayne Co. DHIA Holds Annual Meeting

BETHANY (Wayne Co.) — The 71st annual meeting of the Wayne County affiliate of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) was held in Bethany recently at the Bethany Methodist Church Hall with 80 area dairymen and their families in attendance.

A ham and roast beef "family-style" dinner was served by the ladies of this church to this group.

The Wayne County DHIA program finished the 1996-1997 testing year with 81 herds and 4,444 cows on test.

The average milk production/cow for each herd is 17,110 pounds of milk, 550 pounds of protein, 3.21 percent protein, 627 pounds of butterfat, 3.66 percent butterfat, and producers averaged $1,264 of income per cow over feed costs. Average herd size for Wayne County is about 55 cows per herd.

A number of production awards were presented at this meeting.

The high herd for milk production award was presented to Con Acres (Dan Conlogue), Pleasant Mount for 23,250 pounds of milk per cow.

High herd for protein production honors went to Kevin and Gerarda Burleigh, Pleasant Mount with 740 pounds of protein per cow.

High herd for butterfat production winner was Rowe Brothers, Honesdale with 889 pounds of butterfat per cow.

From the left, Marilyn Johnson accepts a plaque honoring her 30 years service to Wayne County Dairy Herd Improvement Association members from D. Ellis Dix, acting chairman of the Wayne County DHIA Advisory Commitee.

The high cow for milk production award went to George and Dave Banicky, Thompson, for production by "Norma," with 36,398 pounds of milk.

The high cow for protein production was owned by Sno-Ridge Dairy (Jack & Kim Crawford), of Forest City. "Missy" made 1,084 pounds of protein.

The high cow for butterfat production award went to the Rowe Brothers, Honesdale for "Jackie," with 1,414 pounds of butterfat.

The high lifetime cow for milk and protein production award was presented to James Slocum, Susquehanna for his "Echo" cow. She made 228,785 pounds of milk and 7,614 pounds of protein in 10 lactations.

The high lifetime cow for butterfat production award went to the Rowe Brothers, Honesdale, for the production by "Daylight," with 10,055 pounds of butterfat in eight lactations.

The county's high quality milk award was presented to Art and Barb Rutledge, Damascus, who had a somatic cell count average for the 1996-1997 testing year of 69,000.

Herd Improvement Awards for Milk or Butterfat or Protein Production were presented to Randy and Jean Price, Damascus (+3,149 pounds/milk/cow — +65 pounds/butterfat/cow — +80 pounds/protein/cow); Brookside Farm, Damascus (+2,733 pounds/milk/cow — +83 pounds/butterfat/cow — +93 pounds/protein/cow; and Tri-Non Farms, Pleasant Mt. (+2,233 pounds/milk/cow — +78 pounds/butterfat/cow — +76 pounds/protein/cow).

Pa. DHIA herd management awards were presented, in order, to Tom Worobey, Preston Park; Kevin and Gerarda Burleigh, Pleasant Mt.; and Art and Barb Rutledge, Damascus.

Wayne County herds averaging at least 650 pounds of protein or more per cow for the 1996-1997 testing year, included three with 730 pounds, or more.

Those herds were owned by Kevin and Gerarda Burleigh, Pleasant Mt., with 740 pounds of protein; Highland Farms (William R. Bryant), Honesdale, 732 pounds of protein; and Con-Acres (Dan Conlogue), Pleasant Mt., 730 pounds of protein.

Others with high protein production included Tom Worobey, Preston Park, 720 pounds of protein; Art and Barb Rutledge, Damascus, 716 pounds or protein; George and Dave Banicky, Thompson, 704 pounds of protein; Dale Worobey, RD#2, Thompson, 698 pounds of protein; Sunrise - Ave. Farms (Charles P. Dennis, Jr.), Honesdale, 676 pounds of protein; N. Gary Kravetsky, Thompson, 663 pounds of protein; Rowe Brothers, Honesdale, 661

Registration Deadline Dec. 12 For Crop Advisor Exam

EDGEWATER, Md. — The sign-up deadline for the Mid-Atlantic Certified Crop Adviser (MACCA) exam to be held in this region on Friday, February 6, 1998 is fast approaching. All registration forms for the exams which will be held at both the Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA) in Annapolis, Md. and the Holiday Inn Monticello, Charlottesville, Virginia, but be received by December 12, 1997. The Mid-Atlantic Certified Crop Adviser Board has been established for New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and, West Virginia.

The Certified Crop Adviser (CCA) program is a nationally recognized, voluntary certification program developed through the collaborative efforts of the public sector and the agricultural industry to ensure high standards for crop advisers. It is intended for anyone who makes nutrient, pesticide, crop, or environmental recommendations to producers, including dealers, distributors, applicators, consultants, manufacturers, allied industries, and state and federal agency personnel. To date over 200 individuals have passed the rigorous six hours of exams and become certified.

The CCA program is administered by state or regional boards in association with the American Society of Agronomy, which handles similar programs for specialists in agronomy, crop consulting, weed science and other agricultural disciplines. To become Mid-Atlantic CCA certified, an applicant must:

- have at least two years of crop advising experience with a BS degree in agriculture, three years of crop advising experience with an associate degree in agriculture, or have a minimum of four years of crop advising experience post high school;
- provide employer and client references;
- pass a national and the two MACCA regional exams; and
- sign a code of ethics.

To remain certified, a member must participate in 40 hours of continuing education over a two-year period with a minimum of 10 hours in any one year, and undergo an audit biannually by the MACCA Board to verify continuing education and adherence to the code of ethics.

As a CCA, an individual must receive continuing education credits for a wide variety of agricultural topics. "The program helps demonstrate that the agricultural industry prides itself on high standards of professionalism and knowledge," said Mark Fuchs, chairman of the MACCA. The deadline for the February 8, 1998 exam is December 12, 1997. For registration materials contact: Michele Welsh, 608-273-8080.

Tree Seedling Available

SPRING GROVE (York Co.) — Now is the time to plan for tree planting to be done in the spring of 1998.

The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company, Spring Grove, will once again share the cost of tree seedlings with interested landowners.

Glatfelter will cost share seedlings ordered by nonindustrial landowners. Tree seedlings available under this year's program include Virginia pine, white pine, white spruce, Norway spruce, and Japanese larch.

All seedlings are furnished by the Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources. Orders will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company imposes no restrictions of any kind, but landowners must comply with state regulations regarding the planting of these trees. Pennsylvania regulations include:

- Trees may not be used for Christmas trees, decorative or ornamental uses, or for windbreaks.
- The minimum acceptable order is for 500 seedlings which will plant three-quarter acre.
- All trees become the property of the landowner who may harvest them at a future date for any wood product.

The Glatfelter program has an overall dollar limitation. Seedling orders will be accepted and cost-shared until that dollar limit is reached. After that, full payment for orders will be the responsibility of the landowner.

If you are a landowner who is planning to plant trees in 1998, act now. The supply of seedlings for the 1998 season is limited.

For information about placing your order, see your local county agent, your Bureau of Forestry district office, or contact them at The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company, Spring Grove, PA 17362, (717) 225-4711.

AN EXPERIENCED TEAM WITH AN AGRICULTURAL BACKGROUND.

CoreStates Bank believes that agriculture is the backbone of America. In Pennsylvania, agriculture is our number one industry.

We recognize the significant role farm and agribusiness plays in contributing to a viable economy. That is why CoreStates Bank is so interested in supporting agriculture.

As part of our continuing commitment, we acknowledge our Agri-Finance Board of Directors.

This group encompasses local representatives from area agribusinesses as well as family farms and brings with them the knowledge and expertise of the agriculture industry.

Talk to your friends at CoreStates Bank, where we believe that agriculture is still the backbone of America.

Holiday Baking Begins With Christmas Cookies

The home economists staffing the Land O'Lakes Holiday Bakeline say that certain baking questions keep popping up year after year. The top five most commonly asked questions and answers include:

•"Why are my cookies flat and spreading?"

Answers(s) •Remember not to over-soften the butter or beat it too long.

•Try refrigerating the dough for 1 to 2 hours until well chilled.

•If dough is still too soft, stir in 1 or 2 tablespoons of flour.

•Be sure to cool cookie sheets completely before placing more cookie dough on them.

•"Can I substitute salted butter for unsalted butter?"

Answer: •Yes, you can substitute salted butter for unsalted and vice versa. It isn't necessary to add more salt to the recipe if you're using unsalted butter.

•"How long can I freeze my cookie dough?"

Answer: •Most cookie dough freezes well for up to three months. After mixing the dough, can can wrap and freeze it. To have future batches ready in minutes, drop tablespoons full of dough onto cookie sheets and freeze until firm. Then remove them from the cookie sheets and place in a heavy-duty, reclosable plastic food bag and return to the freezer. When you're ready to bake, take the dough out of the freezer and thaw it in the refrigerator until it's just soft enough to use.

•"What are the best methods for shipping cookies and candies to family and friends?"

Answer(s) •Line a cookie tin with aluminum foil or plastic food wrap Take four to six cookies of the same size and wrap together in aluminum foil or plastic wrap. Layer cookies with crumbled paper towel around them until container is full. Place tin a sturdy cardboard box.

•Seal box with adhesive tape and wrap with an outer wrapper. Mark the package "Perishable Food" to ensure rapid transit and careful handling.

•Please see enclosed release on packing and shipping baked goods for more detailed information and tips.

Of course, a quick call to the Holiday Bakeline at 1-800-782-9606 will provide the answers to these questions and any others that come up as consumers bake their way to a happy holiday.

BUTTERNUT COOKIES

3 cups sugar
1½ cups butter
5 eggs
6 tablespoons milk
1½ teaspoon cream of tarter
1½ teaspoon baking soda
7 cups flour

Mix everything together. Roll out on floured surface to about ½-inch thick then cut into stars and bells for Christmas cookies. Bake for about 7 minutes at 350 degrees. Cool. Frost and add candy sprinkles.

Creamy Vanilla Frosting:
½ cup shortening
1 pound powdered sugar
⅓ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix well. Makes 2 cups.

There's nothing like baking to bring a family together. With a little help from mom and dad, kids will have a blast rolling up Milky Way Meteor Crisps and creating Frosted Angels and Solar Swirls.

MILKY WAY METEOR CRISPS

½ cup butter
10½-ounce bag miniature marshmallows
2.15-ounce chocolate covered caramel and nougat candy bars*, chopped
6 cups crisp rice cereal
Colored sugars, decorated candies, sprinkles

In 4-quart saucepan, melt butter over medium-low heat. Stir in marshmallows until melted. Remove from heat; stir in candy bars. Stir in cereal.

With buttered hands, shape mixture into 1-inch balls. Roll in colored sugars, decorator candies or sprinkles. Place on waxed paper. Store in airtight containers between sheets of waxed paper.

Tip: Cookies can be formed into different shapes and sizes. For gifts, shape into large popcorn size balls, wrap in colored cellophane and tie with ribbon.

FIVE-STAR MOLASSES TEA CAKES

2¼ cups all-purpose flour
⅓ cup sugar
¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter, softened
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
⅓ cup milk
3 tablespoons molasses (light or dark)
Powdered sugar

Heat oven to 350 degrees. In large mixer bowl, stir together flour, sugar, brown sugar, cinnamon, and salt. Add butter; beat at low speed until crumbly (1 to 2 minutes). Reserve ⅓ cup crumb mixture for topping; set aside.

To remaining crumb mixture, stir in baking powder and baking soda. Beat at low speed until well mixed (1 minute). Add milk and molasses; continue beating just until moistened (30 to 60) seconds. Do not overmix.

Divide dough into 16 pieces. Shape into ¾-inch thick moons, stars, circles, etc: place 2-inches apart on cookie sheets. Sprinkle with reserved crumb mixture.

Bake 11 to 14 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Do not overbake.

Sprinkle with powdered sugar. Store in airtight containers. 16 servings.

Tip: If desired, drizzle cakes with melted chocolate.

TOMMY'S FAVORITE COOKIES

1 pound dark brown sugar
½ pound butter
3 eggs
⅓ cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups flour
1 cup white raisins
1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
1 package butterscotch chips

Mix and drop by teaspoonful onto a cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 12 minutes.

Ring in the season with these baked treats. When baking blunders occur, call the Land O' Lakes Holiday Bakeline, 1-800-782-9606, which is open from now through Dec. 24, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. (EST) seven days a week to answer all your baking questions.

Featured Recipe

Are the bottoms of your cookies too brown? Do your cookie cutouts spread into one giant cookie when baked?

Call the Land O' Lakes Holiday Bakeline 1-800-782-9606 for help with these problems or any other baking dilemnas. From now through Dec. 24, the bakeline is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. (CST) seven days a week. That's 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. (EST), which is our readership area.

Last season, a record-breaking 55,000 people called the Bakeline for help. One eager-to-please grandfather called for a pie crust recipe because his grandchildren complained his typical crust tasted like cardboard. The home economist gave him a sure-fire winning recipe and shared tips for a buttery, light, flaky pie crust.

In addition to receiving advice from home economists extensively trained in the Land O' Lakes Test Kitchens, callers will receive a free "Land O'Lakes Bake You A Star" recipe leaflet, filled with dazzling holiday treats and quick baking tips.

FROSTED HOLIDAY ANGELS

Frosting:
2 cups powdered sugar
¼ cup butter, softened
2 to 3 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Food coloring
Angel body: sugar ice cream cones
Wings: small or large pretzel twists
Head: chocolate or vanilla wafer cookies
Hair: Toasted coconut
Halo: Fruit-flavored ring-shaped candies
Decorations: Mini candy coated chocolate pieces, decorator candies or sprinkles, decorator gels and frostings, gum drops, mini chocolate chips, etc.

In small mixer bowl, combine all frosting ingredients. Beat at low speed, scraping bowl often, until fluffy (1 to 2 minutes). Tint frosting as desired in pastel colors. Reserve some white or yellow frosting for attaching heads, hair, and faces.

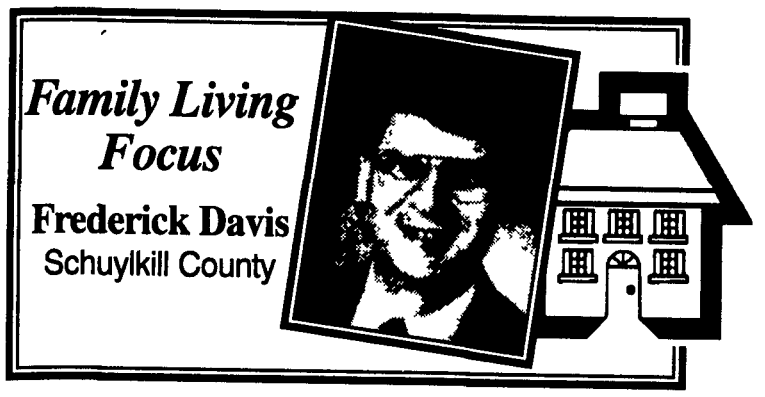
Place sugar cone upside down and frost. Attach pretzel twist to cone with frosting to make wings. Decorate angel body as desired with decorator gels, frostings, and candies. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes to set frosting.

For angel head decorate wafer cookie with candies using frosting to attach eyes, nose, and mouth. Attach head to cone with frosting.

For hair, attach coconut with frosting. Let stand until frosting is set (5 to 10 minutes). Attach fruit-flavored ring-shaped candy for halo.

8 angels.

To toast coconut: Spread coconut in shallow pan. Bake at 350 degrees, stirring often, for 7 to 10 minutes or until lightly browned.



Consumer Advice On Charitable Donations

This is the time of the year when good charities need your help! But this is also the time of year when we receive a lot of high pressure calls and solicitations for contributions to questionable organizations and receive unordered merchandise as a gift for future donations.

Unfortunately, fraud in the "charitable contributions game" is a growing problem in our country, with 75 percent of reported cases against our elderly population. It is important to remember that the funds which are raised through legitimate telemarketing are the lifeblood for many major nonprofit organizations.

This week we will offer some hints on how to be sure your charitable contributions are going to worthwhile causes and are being spent wisely.

If you receive unsolicited or unordered merchandise, you are under no obligation to pay for those items or to send a contribution, even if you choose to use them. The charitable organization sends you those labels, greeting cards, tickets, and merchandise at their own risk, hoping to arouse your sense of obligation to send a contribution as payment.

In looking for a good charity, take the following precauctions if you are not already familiar with the organization:

1. Request written information. Don't be tricked by an impressive sounding name or one that is similar to a well known charity. Too many charities try to take advantage of another charity's good name and reputation by using an almost identical name, symbol or logo.

2. Know your charity's goals. Make sure you agree with the purpose of the charity. You may wish to support a "research" orented charity not a "patient" service or one that provides only "public education." Give to an organization that best fits your giving philosophy.

3. Know how your money is spent. Before donating, ask for and read printed materials about the charity's finances and programs. Find out how much of your donation goes to helping people and program services as opposed to fundraising and administrative expenses. All charities should have a printed annual report which includes this information. Is the caller a professional solicitor? How much do they keep? Call the beneficiary/organization. Do they know of the solicitation and have authorized the use of their name. If not look out!

4. Refuse high pressure appeals.

5. Avoid cash gifts. Make a paper trail with a check payable only to the charity, not to an individual.

6. Don't pay attention in dunning letters and don't respond to letters that say you have pledged money unless you are 100 percent certain that you or a family member did.

7. Don't give your credit card number as payment to anyone if you did not initiate the call!

8. For donating to public safety fund-raisers, be sure that the organization supports your local police or firefighting groups. Simply having the words police or firefighter in an organization's name doesn't necessarily mean that local police and firefighters belong to the group.

9. For door-to-door solicitors, demand identification. Do not feel pressured by the person at the door. The best policy is to mail your donation directly to the charity.

Best advice: Make your own list and give only to those you want to support and are familiar with.

Ice Cream Wins National Awards

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Kreider Farms, 1461 Lancaster Road, Manheim, won national awards for two of their ice cream flavors on November 1. Kreider Farms' strawberry ice cream took a blue ribbon and their vanilla took a red ribbon. These were the only two flavors being judged in this year's competition.

The National Ice Cream and Yogurt Retailers Association (NICYRA) announced the winners on the last day of their 64th Annual Conference held in Bloomingdale, Illinois. Richard Shellenberger, Kreider Farms general manager and past president of NICYRA (91-92) was present to accept the award. "It's great to receive recognition from your peers and competitors," said Shellenberger.

The competition was open to all 426 member businesses who make their own ice cream. "The member businesses range in size from one shop single proprietorships to national restaurant chains," said Shellenberger.

The judging team, headed by Dr. Robert Bradley of the University of Wisconsin, scored each entry on five separate categories. A perfect score is 30 points. Like figure skating competition, the winners are those with scores closest to the perfect "10." Kreider Farms' strawberry ice cream and vanilla each scored 28 points. Twenty-eight points was enough for the strawberry to tie for top honors and for the vanilla to take second place.

The five categories for judging are flavor, body, and texture, color, melting quality, and bacteria.

Kreider Farms was started with the purchase of a Manheim farm in 1935. They currently have a dairy herd of 1,000 Holsteins which supplies all the milk and cream for their ice cream.

Holiday Cookies

CHOCOLATE-DIPPED MOONS

1½ cups powdered sugar
1 cup butter, softened
1 egg
1½ teaspoon almond extract
2½ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon baking soda
2 cups semi-sweet chocolate chips
1 tablespoon shortening
Powdered sugar

Heat oven to 375 degrees. In large mixer bowl, combine 1½ cups powdered sugar and butter. Beat at medium speed until creamy. Add egg and almond extract; continue beating until well mixed. Reduce speed to low; add flour, cream of tartar and baking soda. Continue beating until well mixed.

Shape dough into 1-inch balls. Roll balls into 2-inch ropes; shape into half-moons. Place 2 inches apart on cookie sheets. Bake for 8-10 minutes or until set. (Cookies do not brown). Cool completely.

In 1-quart saucepan, melt chocolate chips and shortening over low heat, stirring occasionally, until smooth (2 to 3 minutes). Dip half of each cookie into chocolate; let stand on waxed paper-lined cookie sheets until chocolate is set. Sprinkle remaining half with powdered sugar. Store between sheets of waxed paper in covered containers. 4½ dozen cookies.

Land 'O Lakes

PENNSYLVANIA CREAM CHEESE COOKIES

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
1 cup butter
8-ounces cream cheese
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 egg
2 tablespoons milk
2 cups flour

Beat butter, cream cheese, sugar, salt, and vanilla. Mix well. Add egg and milk. Gradually add flour. Drop by teaspoon full on lightly greased cookie sheet, about 2-inches apart. Bake at 325 degrees for 15 minutes.

Erica Davis
Berks Co. Dairy Princess

YUMMY BARS

1 package brownie mix
1 cup walnuts, chopped
1 cup chocolate chips
2 cups graham crackers crumbs
1 can sweetened condensed milk

Make brownies according to the mix. Add ½ cup nuts. Spread in 13x9-inch pan. Mix crushed graham crackers, chips, nuts, sweetened condensed milk. Spread on unbaked brownie. Bake at 350 degrees for 40-50 minutes.

In the meantime, melt 6 tablespoons butter in saucepan. Add:
3 cups confectioners' sugar
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2-3 teaspoon evaporated milk

Blend and spread on cooled cookie.

Topping:
2-ounces unsweetened chocolate
2 teaspoons butter

Melt together and spread on top after it cools. Cut in small squares.

Pa. Alternate Dairy Princess

PEANUT BLOSSOM COOKIES

1 cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs
1 cup peanut butter
3½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons milk
½ cup sugar for dipping
1 pound chocolate kisses

Cream together butter, granulated sugar, and brown sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs and peanut butter.

Sift together flour, baking soda, and salt, and stir into creamed mixture. Add milk and mix.

Shape into balls with hands, dip in sugar and arrange 2 to 3 inches apart on lightly greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 7 minutes. Remove from oven and quickly press a kiss in the center of each cookie. Return to oven and bake for five more minutes.

Remove from oven and cool. Makes about 10 dozen. Tip: instead of using chocolate kisses, use chocolate hugs.

Sullivan Co. Dairy Princess

MONSTER COOKIES

12 eggs
2 pounds brown sugar
4 cups granulated sugar
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 tablespoon corn syrup
8 teaspoons baking soda
1 pound butter
3 pounds peanut butter
18 cups oatmeal
1 pound chocolate chips
1 pound M&Ms

Mix in order. You will need a very sturdy mixing spoon. Drop by teaspoonful onto a cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for exactly 8 minutes. Remove from oven before they appear done as they burn easily.

Kristina Pardoe

ULTIMATE BUTTER COOKIES

1 cup unsalted butter, softened
½ cup sugar
2¼ cups all-purpose flour
Red and green decorator sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 large egg yolk

Cream butter with sugar, salt, and egg yolk until smooth with an electric mixer. Gradually beat in flour. Wrap dough in plastic wrap; refrigerate one hour or two days. This allows the flavors to blend and develop, bringing out the butter flavor of the dough.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Roll out dough on lightly floured surface to ⅛ -inch thickness. Cut into desired shape using holiday cookie cutters. Place on lightly greased cookie sheets. Sprinkle with decorator sugar. Bake for 12-15 minutes. Makes 3½ dozen cookies.

Erica Davis

DATE OATMEAL COOKIES

¾ cup butter
1 cup light brown sugar
2 large eggs
3 tablespoons whole milk
1½ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
¾ teaspoon salt
2 cups rolled oats
1½ cups cut up dates
1 cup chopped nuts, pecans, walnuts

Cream together thoroughly shortening, sugar, eggs, milk, and vanilla.

Sift together flour, baking soda, and salt, and stir into creamed mixture.

Stir in oats, dates, and nuts. Chill dough 3 to 4 hours.

Preheat oven 375 degrees and lightly grease baking sheets.

Roll chilled dough into balls (size of walnuts). Place 3-inches apart, then flatten ball to ¼ -inch with bottom of a glass dipped in flour. Bake for 10 to 12 minutes, until lightly brown. Cool on wire rack. Yields 4 to 4½ dozen.

GINGER CREAMS

¼ cup shortening, softened
½ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
½ cup molasses
½ cup water
2 cups all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Cream together thoroughly the shortening, sugar, egg, and molasses. Stir in water then sift together and stir in flour, baking soda, salt, ginger, nutmeg, cloves, and cinnamon. Chill dough several hours.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Lightly grease and flour baking sheet. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls about 2-inches apart on prepared baking sheet. Bake 7 to 8 minutes or until set, and until touched lightly no fingerprint remains. Cool slightly.

While slightly warm, frost with a creamy lemon or vanilla-flavored icing.

Yields: about 4 dozen 2-inch cookies.

Very early morning.

A cool, crispness whisks the final remnants of sleep from my brain as I step onto the back porch, quietly closing the storm door. All is silent across the farmstead, save the low humming of the milking system at the barn.

And our world smells absolutely heavenly.

On a few of the most stubborn dry leaves still cling to the near-bare skeletons of our old maples, silhouetted against the fading night sky. A multitude of their brethren instead lie gathered in great piles scattered about the yard, some deliberately chopped for mulching, the others windblown into eddies of the yard in escape of persistent wind. Their woodsy, musty scent permeates the cool air. In dying, they offer this final gift of fragrance, while yielding to the relentless aggression of nature creating organic matter to grow up another generation.

This heady perfume of fall leaves (like that of drying hay) is an elusive aroma, one which no room-deodorizer or scented candle can ever come close to matching, despite what advertising hype might promise.

Mixing and mingling with this final, fading fragrance of fall is another gift for us lovers of nose-pleasing scents. Wood smoke. Air pollution, some environmentalists argue. But not even close to the spewings of the thousands of vehicles that whip through the farm daily on the interstate. And it smells infinitely more wholesome and earthy.

Back inside the house, the kitchen is warm with the daybreak fragrances of freshly-brewed coffee and toasted bagels. The Farmer returns briefly from the barn, wafting behind him those familiar scents of the barn, a mingling of cows and silage, bedding and manure.

Visiting little kids often clamp their fingers securely over the noses to fend off that unfamiliar and to them offensive "potpourri of cow." But, to us, it is the everyday, almost unnoticed, scent of earning a living, with its promise of fresh milk and well-aged cheese, roast beef, hamburgers...and milk chocolate candy bars.

My morning chores usually conclude in the greenhouse, to prop open the door on sunny days, water the plants and inhale the life-giving aromas of moist ground and green foliage. Impatiens blooms are plentiful, but though colorful and cherry, add no fragrance. Nor do the lingering mums and rejuvenating geraniums, usually pretty but nearly odorless. Floral perfume potential lies a few weeks in the future, if I ever get the promise of delicate paperwhites and fat hyacinths potted up.

Some days, the wonderful, yeast smell of baking bread is waiting inside the basement door, thanks to a bread-machine gift from dear friends. Started before morning barn chores, the breadmaker had done it's thing by mid-morning, when The Farmer and I may split the crispy-hot bottom crust as a snack. Or, I'll guiltlessly enjoy that first steaming piece by myself.

And soon, a most traditional, seasonal fragrance will find many of hour homes, that of pine or spruce or fir or cedar. The pungent sweetness stirs emotions and memories, its mountainy-freshness enhanced by expectations of twinkling lights and shining stars and gleeful little kids.

There are lots of reasons to put up a fresh holiday tree, most of them debateable against the less-mess logic of the very attractive, real-looking artificial ones available.

Except that, for those of us who hunger for that pine smell, real Christmas trees just make good scents.

Experience Christmas At Fort Hunter

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - What can be more beautiful and relaxing this holiday season than a visit to a wonderful 19th century mansion glowing in the warm light of candles and scented with pine boughs and fresh fruit? Fort Hunter Mansion is bedecked for the holidays on Tuesday, December 2nd through Tuesday, December 23rd, allowing visitors to experience a few moments of pure holiday enchantment.

Christmas begins at Fort Hunter when the Civic Committee of the Garden Club of Harrisburg decorates the Mansion with fresh greens, fruits, dried and fresh flowers. Garland gracefully drapes the stairway, mistletoe hangs in the hall, candles glow in the windows, dried flowers and greens fill the mantels as pungent smells of pine and fruit permeate the air, escorting visitors back to another time.

The Mansion is open Tuesday through Sunday, closed Mondays, from 12 noon to 7 p.m. for guided tours which highlight the holiday trimmings and customs of long ago. Tours by candlelight are offered after dusk. The Museum Shop is stocked with tasteful and unique Christmas gift ideas and is open during museum hours for timely holiday shopping.

Memories of childhood wonder come alive again with the Toy Train Exhibit at Fort Hunter! The Toy Train exhibit will be open on Saturdays and Sundays from Saturday, November 29 through Sunday, December 21 from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. in the Fort Hunter Centennial Barn to delight young and old alike.

Returning for their second year the Keystone Model Railroad Historical Society will exhibit HO gauge trains on an 8 x 24 feet layout which is available for viewing from all sides. Old and new trains will be displayed and each week members of the Keystone Model Railroad Society will bring different trains for the exhibit, adding additional interest.

This intriguing exhibit is free to the public and is made possible by a generous grant from the architectural firm of Crabtree, Rohrbaugh and Associates.

In the dim light of the Fort Hunter Centennial Barn the hushed sounds of early Christmas music will ease the harried Christmas spirit. Singing early, traditional Christmas songs, The Carolers will perform a free concert on Tuesday, December 2 at 6:30 p.m.

A group of local musicians who perform only during the holiday season, The Carolers share their talents, in costume, through a a capella music from the 18th and 19th centuries.

The Friends of Fort Hunter will host the Victorian Tea at Fort Hunter on Sunday, December 7 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

A popular tradition in the Harrisburg area, the Victorian Tea at Fort Hunter brings to life the civilized joy of old-fashioned formal entertaining. The Friends of Fort Hunter host this gracious event allowing visitors not only a glimpse but also a taste of the past. A donation of $6 for adults and $5 for children 12 and under will be accepted at the door.

When John and Helen Reily lived at Fort Hunter at the turn of the century they participated in formal events such as the Tea; Helen occasionally had the special honor of being asked to pour the tea. Visitors to the modern Tea will sample hot, spiced tea and light refreshments typical of a Victorian tea. The Mansion will be decorated for the holidays with fresh greens and natural trimmings and guests are welcome to stroll the Mansion and enjoy. A special costumed poetry reading will be performed through the afternoon.

Graybill Farm Home On Holiday Tour

JOYCE BUPP,
York Co. Correspondent

AIRVILLE (York Co.) On the twelfth week before Christmas, Nedra Graybill prepared for display twelve Snowbaby statues, eleven different angels, ten reverse-painted balls, nine David Winter houses, eight assorted dolls, seven curious critters, six Silhouettes figures, five paperweights, four decorated trees, three water globes, two gurgling fountains and the pickle hanging in the pine tree.

And that all made barely a dent in a stash of carefully-packed boxes filled with the hundreds of decorations and collectibles that will glisten, glitter, and glow throughout the holidays at Graybill's picturesque, turreted farm house east of Airville Nedra's reputation as a holiday decorator is well-known among her friends and family, who eagerly anticipate seeing what new surprise she's added each season.

The Graybill home is one of several lovely, historic homes in the Airville area preparing for the first-ever Christmas in the Country holly tour to benefit the Collinsville Area Library. That tour is scheduled for Sunday, December 14, from 1 00 to 4 00 p m

"I've always very much enjoyed going on holly tours of homes at Christmas; that was the reason I agreed to take part in this one for the library," explains Christmas-decorating enthusiast Nedra

As a child growing up in Forrest Hill, Maryland, Nedra had an opportunity one holiday season to look at the Christmas tree in the home of school friends She was fascinated with the village of miniature cottages that have been set up under the tree, the first she had ever seen. After her marriage in 1933 to dairy farmer Creed Graybill, Nedra designed a small "platform" under the couple's first Christmas tree, fashioning it from a green, mossy material and using dried twigs for trees.

Over the years, the display has spread from a simple layout under the tree to collections filling every nook and cranny of the spacious Graybill farm home, with its marble fireplace, pocket doors, and original oak woodwork. As six daughters arrived in the family, Nedra's Christmas decorating team expanded

"I usually begin Thanksgiving night, after our dinner is over, " Nedra says of the month or more it takes to unpack, design, set up, hang and arrange numerous collections and displays of Christmas ornaments and artifacts Some date to the family's earliest Christmas celebrations and many have been handmade by Nedra, her daughters, family, and friends Each year the collection acquires several additions

With the deadline of the mid-December Holly Tour, Nedra began unpacking boxes early, setting up the base of the platform display that covers a large corner of the living room and sets off the two large and one small Christmas tree located there When two of her daughters and sons-in-law were available one day in late September, Nedra took advantage of the assistance to begin setting up the trees.

"When I had help, I got at it," she chuckles. It was fortunate that Nedra go such an early start; in late October, she slipped and fell, resulting in a cast on her broken left wrist Her family, which always participates in the extensive decorations, rallied to help prepare the display for the holly tour.

Among the three generations of the family to lend a hand to this year's decorating efforts were four of the smaller great-grandchildren, who were given a small tree to decorate all by themselves. Covered with whimsical decorations, the great-grandchildren's tree is a colorful focal point in the small den adjoining the Graybill farm kitchen.

Nedra Graybill and her daughter Mildred Bacon are ready to welcome Christmas in the Country visitors to the Graybill farm home near Airville.

Focal point of the house, of course, is the grand corner display of three trees, shining with lights and ornaments of many varieties - animals, bells, angels, birds, stars of various shapes plus, lots of creative, surprise ones that tickle the imagination.

"Here's a ball made from pajamas," points out Mildred Bacon, Felton, one of Nedra's daughters who shared many hours with her mother, decorating for the holly tour. Sure enough, the lovely ornament is covered with fabric recycled from a piece of nightwear.

"And here's the pickle," Nedra says, plunking from a branch a glittery, green, gherkin shape. The lighthearted ornament upholds a German tradition that the pickle is a symbol of good luck Tradition further dictated that the first child to find the pickle on Christmas morning - the ornament have been hidden by the parents who decorated the tree in secret on Christmas Eve earns a surprise gift.

Spread beneath the trees is an elaborate fairyland community, its hills and valleys structured over boxes and blocks of styrofoam, all covered with puffy cotton and a sprinkling of artificial snow. Light shines from miniature buildings, a tiny-sized community sporting everything from a sparkling ice castle to shops designed from stained glass to a miniature Grand Ole Opry.

"The lighted barn was given to me by one of our daughters one year for Christmas," notes Nedra, pointing out the small red-ceramic structure with its company of whimsical animals. Before the barn lies a vast snowy meadow, overflowing with tiny people and animals and shimmery glass ponds on which skaters slowly circle.

Many of the assorted displays lovingly arrange throughout the rest of the Graybill home feature Nedra's extensive grouping of Christmas collectibles, including dozens of full-size and miniature Snowbabies, one of the headliner items of the Graybill home stop on the Holly Tour. Arranged in other areas of the house are Seraphim and Silhouettes statuary, as well as an array of angels. Still another display highlights Nedra's prized, reverse-painted Christmas balls, clear globes with intricate scenes painted on the inside of the glass.

"Again, that collection started with a gift from one of our daughters," Nedra explains, noting with a grin, "Once I have two of something, it's a collection.."

Many of her collections took root at Tomorrow's Treasures, the Bel-Air, Maryland, gift shop owned by her daughter, Carolyn Crawford, Forrest Hill. In addition to Mildred and Carolyn, Nedra's four other daughters are Nancy Green, York; Dorsi Snyder, New Bridgeville, Nedra Jean Smith, Airville, and Theda Marie Otter, Forrest Hill. Their families and combined 13 children and 14 grandchildren provide an ongoing source of enthusiasm for the Graybill home's holiday decorating traditions.

As family members have become attached to certain ornaments over the years, Nedra often shares those favorites, passing on the holiday tradition. Knowing how much Mildred particularly admired a tiny glass lamp, Nedra gave it to her daughter some years ago. And, although Mildred had already removed her family's Christmas tree from their home, she promptly carried the lamp out to the discarded tree and hung it on a branch.

As Nedra and Mildred talk about the displays, they reminisce about Christmases past One year, a tree tumbled over on

Nedra in the midst of her decorating. Another toppled onto a couch once, upsetting the decorations but causing no breakage to any of the special ornaments. And, one year, a fresh-cut pine happily sprouted six inches of new growth as it basked in the glow if its holiday loveliness.

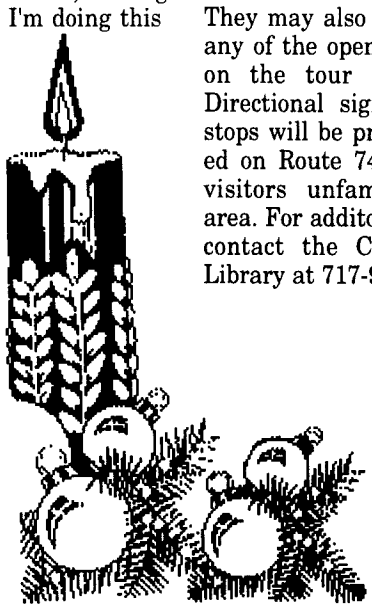
It is not unusual for Nedra to leave her back-door-to-rooftop displays up for many weeks, sometimes until the Easter season. She does, however, put sheets of clear plastic over many of her collections when no visitors are around, to protect the collectibles from dust.

"Sometimes, if I'm confined to the house because we have a major blizzard, I get to work putting it away," she relates, wryly observing that, "The house is a total wreck, coming and going, when I'm doing this It takes all my spare time.

But, come Sunday afternoon, December 14, every collectible will be in place, every light lit, and Nedra will be ready to share her love of Christmas with holly tour guest.

The Christmas in the Country library benefit features open houses at seven area homes as well as Chanceford Presybyteran Church. Other Homes taking part in the tour open-house are those of Joey and Darlene Breining, Chris and David Druck, Gene and Doris Kilgore, David and Penny Snyder, Randall and Peggy Stewart, and Pat and Elmer Sueck's Hollenthal Farm house.

Christmas in the Country tour tickets are $10 each and may be purchased at the Collinsville Library, located on Route 74 south of Red Lion They may also be purchased at any of the open-house locations on the tour that afternoon. Directional signs for the tour stops will be prominently located on Route 74 at Airville, for visitors unfamiliar with the area. For additonal information, contact the Collinsville Area Library at 717-927-9014.



A festive, snow scene Christmas platform sets off the three decorated trees and features a host of whimsical figures, animals and tiny village buildings.

Nedra's display of Snowbaby collectibles and miniatures is an extensive one, and a feature of her stop on the Holly Tour.

Cook's Question Corner

If you are looking for a recipe but can't find it, send your recipe request to Lou Ann Good, Cook's Question Corner, in care of Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. There's no need to send an SASE. If we receive an answer to your question, we will publish it as soon as possible. Sometimes we receive numerous answers to the same request, and cannot print each one.

Answers to recipe requests should be sent to the same address.

QUESTION — Miriam Solter, Philadelphia, requests a recipe for making lemon butter.

QUESTION — Barbara Wood, Monroeville, NJ, wants a recipe for turnip soup like that served at Gap Restaurant.

QUESTION — Jackie Hall, Sorpe, VA, would like a recipe for bread sticks that taste similar to those made by Pizza Hut.

QUESTION — Joyce Rex, Slatington, would like recipes using edible soy beans.

QUESTION — Marlene Sauder, Bowmansville, would like the recipe for the starter for the Amish Friendship Cake.

QUESTION — Marlene Sauder, Bowmansville, would like the recipe for dry brownie mix in a jar with instructions for making brownies called Friendship Brownie Mix.

QUESTION — Mary Horner, Millville, N.J., wants the recipe for a confectionary fruit cake like those sold through Harry & David mail order. The cake has whole cherries, pineapple chunks, and nuts just enough glaze and batter to hold it together, not like traditional fruit cake.

QUESTION — Susan Harris, Lexington, VA, would like a recipe for fruit cake in the jar and one for carrot pie.

QUESTION — A reader from East Earl needs the instructions for cooking and smoking homemade hot dogs. A recipe to make 100 pounds of homemade hot dogs appeared in a previous issue of this paper. Since we do not have a copy of this recipe, did anyone clip the recipe? Please send it in.

QUESTION — V.A.W. from Old Line is looking for a recipe for making escarole soup using a chicken stock base.

QUESTION — L. Burkholder, 1543 Union Grove Rd., East Earl, PA 17519, would like to purchase a used Betty Crocker Cookbook printed in the mid 1960s.

QUESTION — Valerie Harlan, Parkesburg, would like a recipe for "real red taffy apples" with taffy that pulls away not the crackle type. She remembers these from her childhood and would like to recreate this childhood memory for her grandchildren.

QUESTION — Sandra Trefry of Salem, Mass., writes that as a young girl, she remembers her mother purchasing pickled limes, which were sold by the piece out of a gallon glass jar, which is similar to the way pickles are sold.

When the limes are pickled, the skin is tender and they have an unusual but wonderful flavor. Skin and all is eaten. She would love to know how to pickle limes.

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for peach bisque and for fish pie that tastes like that served at Rough and Ready.

QUESTION — Bonnie Hertzler, Lititz, would like to know if anyone knows how to make "Honey Boys," like those made by the Federal Bake Shop, W. King St., Lancaster. The great-tasting cookies looked like gingerbread man with raisins to decorate the face and belly.

QUESTION — Several months ago E. Stoltzfoos, Bird in Hand, cut out a cookie recipe from this section. She lost the recipe but recalls that some of the ingredients were whole wheat flour, wheat germ, oatmeal, nuts, and honey. Does anyone know to what recipe she is referring? Please send a copy.

QUESTION — An anonymous reader sent in a recipe for gingerbread baked in a jar and a number for the internet to receive more recipes. The internet number is wrong as printed. Could the person who sent in the number, please send the correct number plainly printed for publication.

QUESTION — Susan Rzucidlo, Newark, Del., writes that while in Louisiana, she had guinea fricassee, which had a dark gravy and was delicious. Does anyone have the recipe?

QUESTION — G. Halteman would like a recipe for homemade butter made out of goat's milk. (According to an answer in this column, a butter recipe using cow's milk is interchangeable with goat's milk).

QUESTION — A reader tasted a delicious cottage cheese soup at the Red Fox Inn at Snowshoe. Does anyone have a recipe for cottage cheese soup.

QUESTION — Meg from Pittsburgh would appreciate a simple recipe for apple sorbet.

QUESTION — Carl Schintzel, Rockaway, N.J., remembers his mother used to make seasoned rice with cubed pieces of veal in it, which cooked all day on a wood or coal range. He doesn't remember the name or any other ingredients it might have contained, but the mixture was made in a deep gray graniteware lidded pot.

QUESTION — Mary Dengler, Middletown, Ohio, would like a recipe for 10-grain bread that tastes similar to that made by Roscoe Village Bakery in Coshocton, Ohio.

QUESTION — Grace Rumer, Abington, is looking for a recipe for individual crumb buns with cheese pockets. Her husband ate some, which he said were delicious, on the Ocean City Boardwalk in New Jersey.

ANSWER — Mildred Huffman, Lexington, Va., wanted to know how to revive sour dough starter that had gone flat. Thanks to John Zimmerer, Fallston, Md., who writes that sourdough starter can be rejuvenated by adding flour to the starter. It will start bubbling immediately and will be sufficently sour for use in three days. However, depending on how long the starter was untended, it may have gone sour. If it smells bad, it should be discarded.

ANSWER — Thanks to Margaret Strause, Leesport, for sending a recipe for fritter batter.

Fritter Batter For Vegetables, Meat, Fish

In a mixing bowl, mix together well:
1⅓ cups all-purpose or rice flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 tablespoon melted butter or vegetable oil
2 beaten egg yolks

Add gradually, stirring constantly:
¾ cup flat beer

Allow the batter to rest, covered and refrigerated, 3 to 12 hours. Just before using, add:
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten (optional)

Fry in deep fat at 365 degrees until golden brown.

Batter makes enough to coat about 2 cups food.

ANSWER — Patti Norman, Somerville, NJ, wanted to surprise her husband by making Rolly-Polly like his mother used to make. Thanks to Joan Coover, Bernville, for sending a recipe. She also wrote that she had tried every kind of dough with no luck until a friend gave her this recipe. She writes that she likes the cherry kind the best but makes the apple variety more often. She has also used the biscuit recipe on the Bisquick box with success.

Steamed Roly Poly

2 cups sliced apples or berries or cherries
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
1 recipe baking powder biscuits
2 tablespoons butter

Baking Powder Biscuits

Sift together:
2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

With pastry cutter, cut in

Add:
⅔ cup cold milk

Knead a few seconds on floured board. Pat or roll ½ -inch thick. Spread with butter, add berries. Wet edges and press together. Place in bag or steamer top. Steam 1½ hours. Slice and serve.

ANSWER — Susan Harris of Lexington, Va., sent an urgent request for peach butter, which is prepared outside and cooked all day over an open fire similar to the method of preparing apple butter. Thanks to Karen Kinnane, Shartlesville, for answering.

Peach Butter

Start with about one-inch apple juice or cider in the kettle. Warm liquid over low heat. Peel and pit peaches. Cut peaches into slices or chunks and put in warm juice. Stir occasionally until cooking shreds the peaches. Continue to cook, stirring constantly at this time to keep from sticking or burning to bottom of kettle. It is done when peach butter mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. At this time, mix thoroughly to dissolve sugar. Can in water bath or pressure canner or store in refrigerator. We've just made a year's supply of quince butter and apple butter with this recipe.

Baking Angels

ARDEHILLS, Minn. – From November 1 until December 24, the phones at the Land O'Lakes Holiday Bakeline are busy connecting anxious home bakers with calm experts. From the simple inquiry, "How do I store my cookies to keep them fresh?" to the crisis situation, "Help! My sheet of Santa cut-outs has spread to one giant cookie," the 25 Land O'Lakes home economists are capable of providing the answer to almost any baking dilemma.

So, just who are these 'baking angels" willing to spend the holiday season, year after year, answering these questions? Let's take a glimpse behind the scenes at Bakeline Central in suburban Minneapolis/St. Paul.

Seasoned Professionals

The Land O'Lakes Holiday Bakeline staff has an average of 28 years of professional baking experience. All are professionally trained home economists, teachers, nutritionists, and dietitians or hold some other food-related college degree. These seasoned professionals have an amazing 720 years combined baking experience between them.

In additional to that foundation, every year they sharpen their pencils and head back to school Bakeline U that is an intensive training session conducted by the Land O'Lakes Test Kitchens staff.

"Bakeline U, as we fondly refer to it, is a great way for our staff to get together before the Bakeline opens, brush up on the basics of baking, review food-safety guidelines and prepare for the new season," Lydia Botham, director of the Land O'Lakes Test Kitchens, explains. "The hands-on class prepares each Bakeline staffer to answer virtually any baking question that comes her way."

A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Oven

From the basic to the bizarre, the professional Land O'Lakes Holiday Bakeline staff help solve just about every baking blunder imaginable. Here are some of the most memorable kitchen questions and catastrophes recalled by the Bakeline home economists.

- A man called and explained in serious tone that he needed to know why his brownies were burning. Of course, it may have had something to do with the fact that he was making them in a frying pan on the stove.
- In the middle of preparations for a dinner party, a frantic woman from Michigan called when her dog chewed the recipe card for the torte she was making and had no idea how to finish it. The Bakeline staffer found the recipe in the Land O'Lakes recipe archives and saved the day.
- A bachelor baker called because smoke was streaming out of his oven door and the smoke alarm was buzzing. Would it be okay to check on the baking cookies or would they "fall" when he opened the oven?

For answers to all your baking questions, call the Land O'Lakes Holiday Bakeline, 1-800-782-9606, from now through December 24, seven days a week, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. (CST).

Rodgers Named Cooperative Extension Director

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dr. Michelle S. Rodgers has been appointed director of Penn State Cooperative Extension and Outreach for the Capital Region, effective immediately.

As regional director, Rodgers will provide programmatic and administrative leadership for cooperative extension and coordination for university outreach programs in the region's seven counties: Adams, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Lancaster, Lebanon, and York.

"The Capital Region, which encompasses Pennsylvania's agricultural bread basket as well as several urban centers, faces a unique set of issues," Rodgers says.

"With receipts totaling more than $2.5 billion, agriculture is the leading industry in the region," she explains. "The size of this industry means that there is intense demand for educational programming to help agricultural producers maintain cutting edge management and production skills and stay competitive in today's global economy.

"At the same time, these counties are home to more than 1.5 million people who have diverse program needs in youth development, family relationships and community development," she adds. "I hope to foster extension education efforts that will focus on these issues in a balanced way."

Dr. Michelle Rodgers

After receiving her B.S. in home economics education from Indiana University of Pennsylvania in 1980, Rodgers spent about nine years as a Penn State Cooperative Extension home economics agent in Lancaster and Berks counties. From 1989 until her appointment as regional director, she served a combined eight years as assistant to the regional directors of the Capital and Southeast regions. In that capacity, she assisted in staff development, program planning and development, budgeting and personnel matters. From July 1994 to April 1995, she was interim regional director for the Capital Region.

Rodgers received her M.S. in rural sociology in 1988 and her Ph.D. in agricultural education with a minor in public administration in 1997, both from Penn State. She is a member of numerous professional organizations and has received several national and regional awards and honors, including a National Extension Leadership Development internship in 1996-97.

A resident of Akron, Rodgers will be based at the Capital Region cooperative extension office at Penn State Harrisburg.

The Capital Region was one of eight restructured regions created as part of an overall effort to enhance cooperative extension and engage the entire university in a broadened outreach effort. Cooperative extension, with offices in each of Pennsylvania's 67 counties, transfers research-based information to Pennsylvania's citizens through non-formal educational programs designed to meet locally identified needs.

Our oldest daughter has a birthday this first week in December. If I write about her, I know that I cannot do justice to her and all of her activities.

She always was an independent child and when she started school she happily skipped to the bus leaving me feeling sad and forsaken.

In sixth grade she ran the school library as there was no librarian that year. She was easily able to do school work and tend the library. As I remember, she was second in a class of several hundred when she graduated from high school.

Her exuberance really showed the day she came into the kitchen with a letter from Alfred University in New York state telling her that she had a full scholarship. They paid everything during her four years while she earned her B.S. degree and also an R.N. degree. From the time that she was five years old, she intended to be a nurse. After graduation she worked in Rochester for a year and then traveled to Seattle to get a master's degree in medical and surgical nursing. She had a house along Lake Washington and owned a sailboat. We visited her several times as she lived there and raised a family in the next 20 years. Due to her husband's work, they moved several times.

Now that she lives in New Jersey she has been on several national committees as she is a nurse practitioner and sees patients all day. She traveled to Washington, D.C. to help write the tests for other nurse practititioners. And, she also writes for a Nurse Practitioner magazine by condensing articles pertaining to the nursing profession. This summer when our family was in the mountains, she had a two-hour telephone conference as a group planned the rules for treating asthma.

She has come a long way from the little girl who lived on a dairy farm and fed the calves.

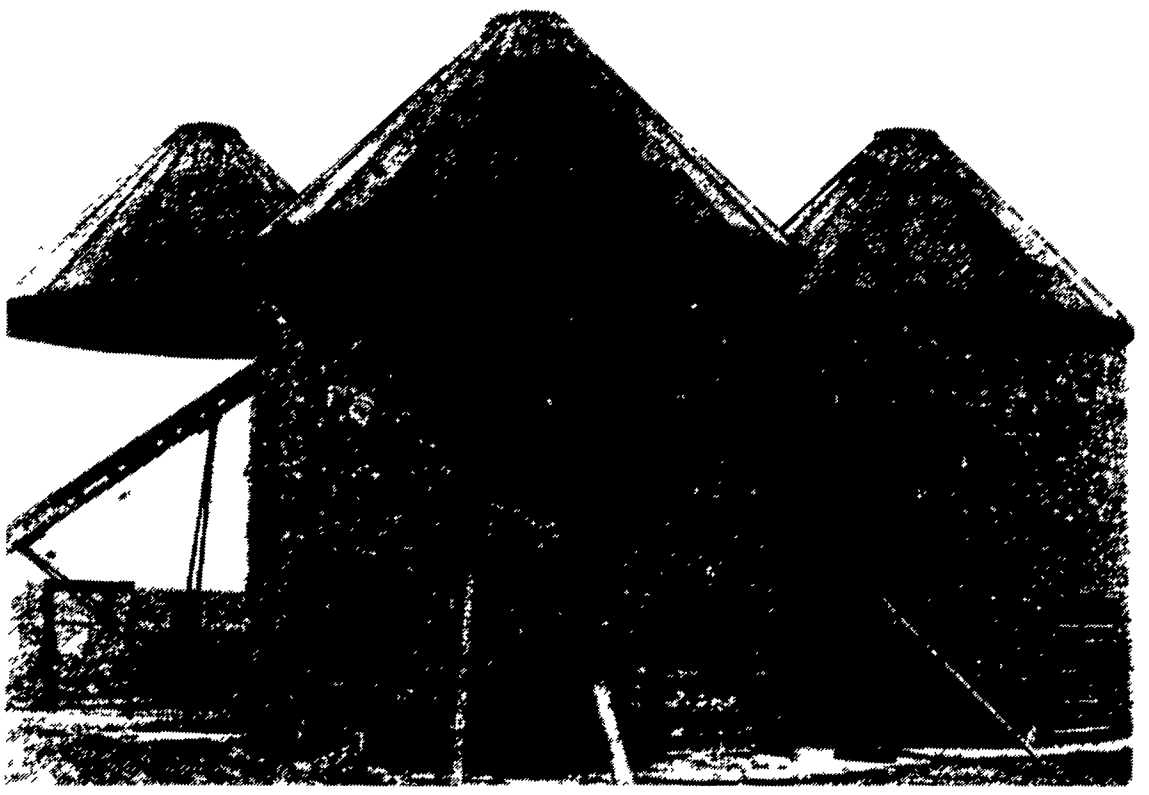
Inside this machine, tiny particles of corn cob swirl about this patient's injured hand, heating it for therapy.



Corn cribs like this were not plentiful this year due to the dry weather. Because of the many uses for corn, it is important to keep developing drought resistant varieties of corn.

We all eat corn...as a vegetable, popped, on the cob, in soup, or in fritters. We fry in corn. oil, sweeten with corn syrup, and corn starch is used to thicken puddings. Read the labels of various food items in the grocery store and you will find that most contain corn

Other somewhat unexpected uses for corn are fireworks, crayons, aspirin, chewing gun, candles, ceramics, inks, soaps, and for theatrical make-up. These are only a few of the several hundred listed by the Illinois Corn Marketing Board.

There are other uses for corn still in the developing stages.

According to the Illinois Corn Marketing Board, a new material in which to pack materials that might break in the mail or with rough handling is called "eco-foam". This is a combination of more than 95% corn starch and a small amount of synthetic additive.

Eco-foam will not harm the environment. You can reuse it, put it on a compost pile or flush down the toilet.

Or how about a fun word to say..."Super Slurper" sometimes called hydosorb.

SuperSlurper is used in the blue plastic reusable ice packs most people keep in their freezers for a picnic or to place on a bruised muscle.

This unusual corn product can actually absorb up to 2,000 times it weight in water and is used to keep underground storage tanks dry.

SuperSlurper can keep the wounds of burn victims dry so they can heal faster.

Even baby diapers can include corn-based SuperSlurper.

"Salting" the roads on an icy winter night is usually done with chloride salt. An environmentally safer alternative is calcium-magnesium acetate which is now made from petroleum. However, scientists are looking into making this product from corn which reduces the price by about $250 per ton.

And still, more research is being done on making butanol from corn which should be produced at 34% less than the present oil based butanol

Butanol is used in plasticisers, resins, lacquers, food extraction, and brake fluids.

Corn Cobs

Those are unusual uses for corn, but there are also strange uses for corn cobs.

Ground up corn cobs are used to heat muscles in order for physical therapy to be more effective.

Inside a machine, minute particles of corn cob are heated and swirled about the injured body part. "It is much more effective then using any other type of heat," says Joe Petlock, an occupational therapist at the Altoona Hospital.

The same product and almost the same process is also used by jewelers to clean and shine jewelry.

Other uses for corn cobs include kitty litter and as an anti-skid material.

Is it any wonder there is concern over the disappearing farm lands?

Larry Breech, newly elected vice president of the Pennsylvania Farmer's Union says, "Corn is very important and we need to be doing more research on developing heartier strains."

As Mary Eubanks wrote in a recent article in "Discover" magazine in which she traces the roots of corn. "Corn is an incredible puzzle, and the story is just unfolding."

Studying the history of corn could help us keep up with the demand the future is sure to bring.

At present, each kernel of corn has the potential to grow an ear containing nearly 800 kernels and a single acre of land can produce more than 13 million kernels of corn. With the increasing productive capability of our nation's farmers, the number of new uses for corn is only limited by imagination.

Why don't pine trees lose their needles?
They do, just not all at once.
First, some tree trivia Pines, spruces and firs are a type of conifer, or tree that has cones and sheds and replaces some but not all of their needles each year. Conifers are part of a group called evergreens — plants that stay green all year round, like hollies, some kinds of shrubs and ivy.
Conifer (say KHAN-uh-fer) needles look very different from the big, broad leaves you rake up every fall. They do the same thing though — they help the tree make food from sunlight. Conifers even lose their needles the same way deciduous plants do. Deciduous (say dee-SID-you-us) trees, like maples and oaks, just lose their leaves all at once.
Hormones in the tree trigger the plant to absorb nutrients from the leaf. After all the nutrients are gone, a layer of cells grows across the base of the leaf's or needle's stem, and the leaf eventually falls off.
Although a few conifers drop all their needles every year just like oak trees, most shed only their oldest needles. Because conifers grow at the tips of the branches, the oldest needles are closest to the trunk. That's why they look like they have healthy needles all the time.
Conifers thrive where it's cold and windy. Most trees don't survive these conditions because they can't drink water from the frozen soil. But the waxy coating on the conifer's long, thin needles help these trees conserve water — and stay green all year round.

Consuming Thoughts

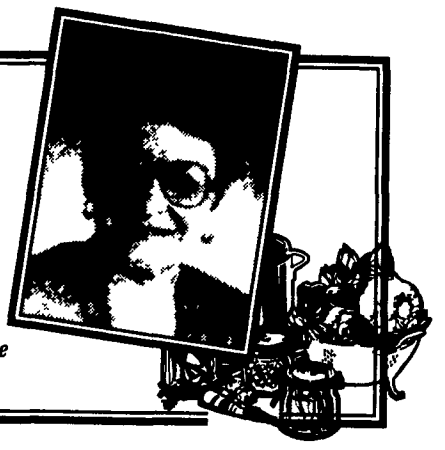
Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



If this is your first year hosting a holiday gathering of family and friends, don't panic! Advance planning is the key to success. By following a few common-sense rules you can avoid the frantic, last-minute running around that turns what should be an enjoyable event into an ordeal.

Begin planning your menu now. Include everything from soup to nuts. Be sure to use familiar recipes. Buy yourself a copy of a reliable cookbook as an early Christmas or Hanukkah present (or check out a copy of one from the library to aid you in the planning process.) Unless you're especially brave, this is probably not the time to experiment.

Make a shopping list and jot down all the necessary ingredients for everything you plan to make. Then consolidate for total amounts needed to prepare a master list. If you're planning to bake from scratch, double check the ingredients required against what you have in the cupboard-but make sure what you have on hand is fresh. Does the baking powder still fizz when you dissolve it? Are the spices still potent? Take "inventory" this way will help avoid those last-minute trips to the market.

Shop ahead for non-perishables and check items off (on your master list) as you go. If you spread your holiday shopping over a number of weeks-instead of days-you can take advantage of specials and coupons. If you're on a tight budget, it will make less of a dent if you purchase holiday items gradually.

Besides stretching your shopping time, begin preparing some foods ahead. Put your holiday meal on a time line and plot out what you'll do when. For example, you can prepare many pastries ahead of time and freeze them for baking later. They'll be ready when you need them for holiday meals or gift-giving.

Give advance thought to table settings and decorations and incorporate washing and ironing linens (and cleaning silver-everyone's favorite task) into your on-going routine. Make sure you have enough serving dishes and storage containers on hand for what you serve and for what is leftover. If you plan to bake with aluminum pans (for gift giving), be sure to put them on your master list.

If turkey is to be the centerpiece of at least one holiday meal, give some consideration beforehand on buying, storing and cooking it. Decide what kind of turkey you want before you go shopping. If finding the "right size" bird is critical, buy a frozen one early and keep it frozen until you're ready to thaw and cook it. To operate safely, your freezer should register 1 degrees F. or slightly lower. If you don't want a large turkey taking up refrigerator space for four to give days (while it thaws), or if you're afraid that you'll forget to take it out of the freezer to thaw, order a fresh bird ahead of time and pick it up a day or two before you'll be cooking it.

Many food stores carry prestuffed, fresh whole turkeys. While these birds are marketed as time savers, from a food-safety standpoint they are potentially hazardous. That's because raw turkey and stuffing ingredients are highly perishable. In addition, when a turkey is stuffed, incubator-like conditions that develop in the cavity can promote bacterial growth. In a home refrigerator, keeping stuffing deep inside a prestuffed turkey cold enough (below 40 degrees F.) to discourage bacterial growth is almost impossible. For this reason, the USDA doesn't recommend purchasing whole, stuffed fresh poultry.

If you have questions regarding the safe handling of poultry or other meats, contact your local extension office or call the Meat and Poultry Hotline at 800-535-4555.

Choose Holiday Traditions That Convey Family's Values

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.) — When your children are all grown up, with families of their own, what do you want them to remember about the holidays of their childhood? It's a question well worth asking yourself as you plan this year's festivities.

So many parents feel out of control, feel victimized by the commercial pressures of this time of year. One way to put yourself back in the driver's seat is by spending a little time thinking about what the holidays meant to you, what you want your children to treasure and value about this time of family togetherness.

Recalling the enjoyable memories of your own childhood is the place to start. What stands out in your mind as evoking the holiday spirit? You may be surprised that what you remember can be a far cry from the images of what the holidays "ought to be" as seen in magazines or on television.

One person may recall that, what made her feel really special was her "job" of arranging, from her very own treasures, the table decoration for Christmas dinner. For others it might have been lighting the Hanukkah candles, or putting the train set together, or squeezing fresh orange juice for the family to drink while opening presents.

It is important to become conscious of your own values, then establish traditions which can best convey these values to your children. Talking your ideas over with the other adults in your family is the next step. Then, a few weeks ahead of time, include the children in a discussion of what they think would be fun to do together over the holidays. Here again, by asking the question you may get some surprising answers.

Some of what you are bound to hear is straight from TV advertising, especially regarding presents. Don't despair, you will gradually want to educate children on how they are being manipulated by commercialism. Saying "no" to everything advertised on television and fighting over it may be worse than giving in on some things. Go along a little bit with what they would like, while helping children develop the values you'd like them to have.

Be selective in how many events and activities you include in your plans. Be careful not to overburden yourself. If you want to create a holiday feeling that is positive and meaningful for children, you need to keep things manageable, to allow enough time to do things with them at their own pace.

It's particularly important to keep this in mind if you have young children. Preschoolers are satisfied by very simple things. They are pleased by repetition. For them it's being together that's the fun.

By making simpler meals, using more pre-made products, suggesting one of the dinner guests bring the turkey, or whatever reduces the demands on your time and can allow you to really enjoy your children's delight in the special holiday traditions of your family's choice.

If you focus too much on all the fancy trimmings, when the celebrations are over and nighttime comes, you may realize you don't even know what happened. The day is gone, everyone is exhausted and cranky, and you end up asking your self: "What did we do with the children today?"

Gleaning Network Ministers To Hungry

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

COLESVILLE, MD. — Over one and a half million pounds of fresh fruits and vegetables that would have gone to waste instead ended up on the plates of this area's poor and homeless thanks to a local organization. The Washington Area Gleaning Network (WAGN), based in Colesville, Montgomery County, organizes a volunteer labor force of about 5,000 to glean produce and fruit from farms throughout Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania.

"What we get is either going to be left in the field and plowed under, or rot, or they're culls coming off a grading line that would be dumped," explained George Roche, chairman of the board of WAGN. He said approximately 25–30% commercial vegetable crops will be left behind in the field because they don't meet the strict criteria of the consumer or buyers for retail outlets. "If they're misshapen or have a few spots the consumer won't buy them, the store won't buy them."

Statistics released by the USDA Economics Research Service back up Roche's statement, indicating more than one quarter of all food produced in the nation, over 96 billion pounds, is wasted. Fresh fruits and vegetables, fluid milk, grain products, and sweeteners account for two-thirds of these losses The USDA study triggered the National Summit On Food Recovery this September in Washington, D C. and at sites throughout the nation.

Though he calls himself retired, Roche's knowledge of commercial vegetable production is based on a life time's experience in working with growers. He can to WAGN after a career in marketing with the Maryland Department of Agriculture. He said he started with WAGN "the split second I retired." The gleaning network started in 1994, and had been chaired by a Methodist pastor. Tom Chandler, another retired man, is executive director. "I retired June 30, 1995. They said to me, 'Hey, you're retiring, you're free, come to a board meeting.' I liked the vision. The kickoff for the season was held the last Saturday in June, the 29th, at Parker Farm (in Clinton, Md.). So I went to my first gleaning." At the second board meeting, the Methodist pastor had been transferred, and Roche found himself volunteering to serve as chairman of the board.

"I was in over my head immediately," he laughs, "One year later I hadn't made a dime."

Roche finds the motivation to give so much of himself to WAGN in his faith. He marvels at what he and Tom Chandler, along with their small army of volunteers, have been able to accomplish, but says he can't take credit for it.

"How can you dream of two retired guys – no secretary, no staff – bringing in one and a half million pounds of fresh fruits and vegetables from farms to the cities this year? That's God. There isn't any other way to explain it," he says.

WAGN uses a number of biblical references in its mission, but centers on Deuteronomy 24,19: "When you reap your harvest in your field, and have forgotten a sheaf in the field, you shall not go back to get it; it shall be for the sojourner, the

Look at the size of this sweet potato! Volunteers gleaned hundreds of thousands of pounds of sweet potatoes that would otherwise have been plowed under.

Sec. of Agriculture Dan Glickman, left, was on hand to present the gleaning network one of the first-ever Hero In Food Recovery awards during the National Summit on Food Recovery and Gleaning held recently. Following the awards presentation, Sec. Glickman went into the fields and gleaned with the group. At right is George Roche of the Washington Area Gleaning Network.

Allegra Leininger Heads Lancaster County's Society Of Farm Women's 650 Members

A gracious hostess, Allegra serves Thanksgiving Pumpkin Pie. It is not unusual for her to serve 35 guests for dinner.

Allegra Leininger, who heads the Lancaster Society of Farm Women composed of 28 societies with 650 members, stands in front of the home that she and her husband built on their farm. During the growing season, Allegra mows several acres of grass and cares for the extensive landscaping surrounding the home.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

REINHOLDS (Lancaster Co.) — Allegra Leininger has long been known for her musical ability in playing the marimba and for her extensive doll collection. Recently she became president of the Lancaster County Society of Farm Women, which has about 650 members.

After moving up through the ranks of county leadership, Allegra assumed the presidential gravel during the county's annual convention held last month. Although this is the first time she has headed the county society, she has been the first and second vice president for the past four years and has at one time or the other held all the leadership positions in Society 3, which is one of the 28 societies that make up the county organization.

Allegra and her husband, Vernon, farm about 500 acres in Reinholds. He recently harvested 37,000 bushels of corn in 22 days, so the couple is well-acquainted with the long hours, hard work, and equipment expense that farming entails.

While farming, music, doll making, and Farm Women member seems like a diverse combination of interests, each adds an aspect to Allegra's life that helps her exemplify the purpose of the organization. Since the Society of Farm Women was founded by Mrs. Frank Black in 1914, it has sought to foster love for the farm and rural life, to uphold the dignity of farming, to teach the responsibility that lies in working the soil; and to enhance the charm of a real country home.

Allegra's love for farm and home shines forth in her conversation and in their home. Hospitality seems to be a trademark of most Farm Women members and Allegra shines in graciousness. She loves to cook and bake, and it is not unusual for the Leiningers to entertain groups as large as 30 for meals.

Several years ago, the couple moved off the farmstead and bulit a house on the land. Allegra made sure it was large enough to easily entertain large groups of people, her ever-expanding doll family, and a music room for her marimba.

As far as her doll collection, Allegra has made everyone of the 130 dolls in her collection. She enjoys dressing and naming the dolls. Her dolls line the winding staircase in the foyer and the room at the top of the staircase.

In addition to sewing dolls, Allegra always has a crewel embroidery or needlepoint project to pick up. The walls of their spacious home are decorated with the finely detailed stitches of her needlework projects.

Allegra and Vernon celebrated their 49th anniversary in October. They have three living adult children and seven grandchildren.

The Leiningers enjoy traveling, and this past summer spent five and a half weeks on a trip to the West Coast.

"I knew we had to take this trip this summer or I couldn't do it for two years," Allegra said of her commitment to the Farm Women presidency.

She and her husband also enjoy riding on their Honda Gold Wing motorcycle and ride with a group of friends for occasional overnight trips.

"I love the fresh air, and feeling a cool breeze on my face during summer evenings," Allegra said. "I've always been an outside person."

The Leiningers are active at Mohler's Church of the Brethren where Allegra sings in the choir, plays her marimba, and periodically teaches the adult Sunday School class.

Sitting idle doesn't seem to be in her vocabulary. Three mornings a week are spent at the fitness club. In addition she enjoys caring for the extensive lawn and landscaping around the house.

Allegra's goal as president of the Lancaster County Society of Farm Women is to do the best job she possibly can. Times have brought changes to the Farm Women Society, she said. Although it was common to limit membership in earlier years, now many societies are scrambling for members. Although state membership lists 2,768 members, the majority of members range between the ages of 60 to 90 years of age. Society 3 of which Allegra is a member has 32 members, but at one time had as many as 45. Membership was limited because it became to large a group to meet in individual homes.

As the members grow older it is more difficult to remain active in the organization. To accomodate older members who do like to drive at night, many societies now hold breakfast meetings.

"The women seem to like that best and we have better response," Allegra said.

She would like to see more younger women join the organization, but at the same time she is realistic and acknowledges that fewer women now live on the farm and those who do are often employed outside the home. Many more options are available to women in this generation than to their mothers and grandmothers, when church was usually the only activity outside the home.

For Allegra and most of the other members, the Society of Farm Women has provided close friendships and helped them develop talents and broaden their horizons through the many educational programs it provides. In addition, they have worked together to raise thousands of dollars for community causes. For these reasons, Allegra intends to do every thing within her power to continue to keep the organization a viable part of the community.

It is her responsibility to plan the agenda for the bimonthly board meetings and to appoint committees to oversee the fundraising, community service, and society functions. In addition, she will attend the state association board meetings and will be assigned to a state committee.

"It's amazing how involved the duties are," Allegra said as she paged through stacks of notes outlining responsibilities. "There's a lot more to do than it first appears to be."

Board meetings are attended by county officers and the president of each of the 28 societies. In the upcoming December board meeting, outgoing president Kathryn Fry will furnish a luncheon for the county committee, and Allegra will officially take over.

"The luncheon is traditionally furnished by the outgoing president and she goes all out in providing a great luncheon," Allegra said.

It will be two years before Allegra will serve the final luncheon that marks the end of her leadership of the county organization. In the meantime, Allegra is busy cooking for their many guests.

Here are two recipes from her. It's too late to serve this scrumptious pie at your Thanksgiving dinner this year, but make sure you clip this recipe from Allegra so you have it on hand for upcoming holiday dinners. Also, the cookie recipe is one that Allegra said every one raves about and is just in time for your holiday baking.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Compare Wild Game's Fat, Cholesterol With Other Meats

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – "Many people in rural areas consume a significant amount of wild game," says Dr. J Lynne Brown, associate professor of food science in Penn State's College of Agriculture. "But information on the fat and cholesterol content of deer, squirrel and other game often is lacking.

"Game meat tends to have the same amount of cholesterol as beef or pork, but considerably less fat than domestic meat," says Brown. Nutrition experts agree it is important for all adults but especially those with heart problems—to limit their fat and cholesterol intake.

The National Cholesterol Education Program recommends that healthy adults limit their daily cholesterol intake to less than 300 milligrams and their fat intake to no more than 30 percent of total calories consumed daily.

The following table shows how wild game stacks up in comparison to beef and pork. The beef sample used is a well-trimmed USDA standard grade. All samples are 100 grams (3.5 ounces) of raw meat. The skin was removed from the birds.

Meat	Fat (grams)	Cholesterol (milligrams)	Calories)
Beef	2.7	69	158
Pork	4.9	71	165
White-tailed deer	1.4	113	153
Mule deer	1.6	85	151
Antelope	1.0	113	148
Buffalo	3.2	45	146
Squirrel	3.2	83	149
Cottontail rabbit	2.4	77	144
Chicken (domestic)	0.7	58	140
Turkey (domestic)	1.5	60	146
Turkey (wild)	1.1	58	158

Many hunters and their families like to eat organ meats of wild game. The cholesterol content of both heart muscle and liver is high. Heart muscle contains 275 milligrams of cholesterol per 3.5 ounces of tissue and liver contains 450 milligrams per 3.5 ounces.

"The extent that you should worry about these cholesterol and fat figures should be balanced with how often you eat these organ meats," says Brown. "If heart stew is a once-a-year prized dish, a moderate portion shouldn't cause problems."

HAPENINGS

Progressive Clovers 4-H Club

The November meeting of the Progressive Clovers 4-H Club was held at Baust Parish House in Tyrone, Maryland.

The meeting was opened by President Amy Miller, followed by the 4-H Pledge led by Jennifer Waskiewicz.

Demonstrations given at the November meeting included: Jon Sanders - "How to make a recycled dream catcher," Kim Holland - "How to make Christmas earrings,", Kim and Mandy Holland - "parts of a camera."

Christmas Craft Workshop was held November 22, followed by "Make A Difference Day" Club members will rake leaves at the Baust Parish House as a club community service project.

On December 13, the Club will serve food and park cars at Brookfield Manor Christmas Open House in Middleburg, MD as a community service project, from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

New officers are president, Amy Miller; vice president, Lauren Harris; recording secretary, Ashley Bowers; corresponding secretary, Matt Carman; treasurer, David Miller; reporter, Amy Ridinger; recreation leader, Heather Harris; historian, Brett and Ryan Haines.

Guest speaker for October was Dr. Donald Carman, from Piney Creek Veterinary Clinic, he concluded his son's demonstration on "Artificial Insemination of a Dairy Goat." His son, Matt Carman started the demonstration on "How to Make a Buck Jar." Together the two gave a very informative and interesting demonstration.

Guest speaker for November was Brian Dicken, from the Carroll County Department of Health. He showed a video and talked about rabies; how you can get it, the treatment, what kinds of animals carry rabies, and what kinds of animals can not carry rabies.

The next meeting will be Monday, December 8 at 7:30 p.m. at Baust Parish House, in Tyrone, Maryland. The Club will have its Christmas Party. Each member that would like to exchange a gift with another 4-H'er may do so. Each member is asked to bring a Neighbors in Need Gift as part of the Club's community service project.

Simply compare these open-station tractors side by side to their low-cost competitors, and you'll quickly see there is no comparison. All feature proven, high-torque John Deere engines that many farmers say will outpull higher-horsepower engines. Both the 12-speed SyncroVantage™ transmission (on the 85-hp 6405 and 95-hp 6605) and the 16-speed PowrQuad™ transmission (on the 105-hp 7405) offer more shifting ease. HydraVantage™ hydraulics deliver up to 70 percent more flow for faster cycles and higher lift capacities. Electrohydraulic hitch controls are more precise and easier to adjust than mechanical controls. Flat operator platforms with console-mounted controls offer more comfort and convenience. PermaClutch 2™ provides greater clutch reliability. And larger fuel tanks let you work longer between fill-ups.

Now consider that all this extra productivity is yours at about the same list price as competitive models.

So boost your productivity without blowing your budget. Get the Advantage from your John Deere dealer.

Be sure to ask your dealer how Advantage Series Tractors compare to deluxe model 6000 and 7000 TEN Series Tractors.

Farm Show Ice Cream Contest

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The deadline for entries in the 1998 Farm Show Ice Cream Making Contest is Dec. 12.

While the actual contest is to take place at noon Jan. 14 in the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, the first eight qualified entrants are to be selected from entries made before Dec. 12.

Entries must be submitted in writing and include the name, address, phone number and complete recipe.

They should be mailed to: Farm Show Ice Cream Making Contest, RD1, Box 166, Emlenton, PA 16373.

Only original, unpublished recipes will be accepted for competition. Judging will be based on the effective use of dairy products, taste and visual appeal, recipe originality and creativity, and ease of preparation.

The contest is open to all individuals and organizations (with only on entry per family, club or group), except those having a professional food status, or an affiliation with the sponsoring organizations. The contest is sponsored by the Pa. Dairy Promotion Program.

For complete official rules, call (717) 787-6903.

Contestants are eligible to win a $200 first place prize, $150 for second place, or $125 for third place. Former winning recipes include Honey Nut Vanilla, and Banna Split.

You ask

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

Thanksgiving Pumpkin Pie

1¼ cups pumpkin puree
¾ cup heavy cream
¾ cup milk
1 cup granulated sugar
3 whole eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon Grandma's molasses
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon ginger
¾ teaspoon salt
Sweetened whipped cream for serving
9-inch unbaked pie crust

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Combine cream, milk, and sugar in small saucepan, and heat slowly over low heat. Do not boil. Combine the pumpkin puree, eggs, molasses, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, ginger, and salt in a bowl; slowly pour in the hot cream mixture, stirring constantly.

Pour into the pie crust and place in the preheated oven; bake 10 minutes. Turn the oven down to 350 degrees and continue to bake for 30 minutes more or until set. Stick a toothpick into the center of the pie to see if it is done; it should come out clean. Allow to cool. Serve with whipped cream. Makes one 9-inch pie.

Raisin Coconut Treasure Cookies

1½ cups finely crushed graham cracker crumbs
½ cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
14-ounces condensed milk
½ cup butter, softened
2 cups raisins
1⅓ cups flaked coconut
1 cup walnuts

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Mix graham cracker crumbs, flour, and baking powder with electric mixer. Beat in sweetened condensed milk and butter until smooth. Add crumb mixture; mix well. Stir in raisins, coconut, and walnuts.

Drop by tablespoonfuls onto lightly greased cookie sheets. Bake 9-10 minutes until lightly browned. Cool 2-3 minutes. Remove from cookie sheets. Store loosely covered at room temperature. Makes 3 dozen.

All 130 dolls handcrafted by Allegra exude personality after they are named and dressed by Allegra. Her dolls line the Leiningers' winding staircase and fill a room at the top of the stairs.

Gleaning Network Ministers To Hungry

fatherless, and the widows; that the Lord your God may bless you in all work of your hands."

Said Roche, "In the streets and in the fields, that's where we spend most of out time and that's where Jesus spent most of his time."

In reality, George Roche spends a good deal of time in his home office on the phone, too Lining up transportation for the volunteer gleaners from the inner cities where a good many of them come from, and then trying to find someone with a CDI, who can drive the donated trucks filled with the results of a day's gleaning can be overwhelming. He and Tom Chandler also take care of all the paperwork involved in running the network, from writing grants to farmer's taxes.

North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland all have a state gleaning law that "encourages the farmers to put up with these people coming all over their farms," Roche said.

Most of the gleaners at WAGN come from the inner city in Washington. Many are from church groups. Large numbers of older women tend to come. There are a group of "regulars" who come out from public housing. Other gleaners are homeless or recovering addicts. There are groups as diverse as attorneys from the D.C. Bar Association, and students at the Naval Academy. September and October are the biggest months for volunteers because of schoo' groups coming out. The Jewisl Holy Days were very busy, according to Roche, who says the Jewish and Seventh Day Adventists often glean on Sundays. "People will come out who will never walk through a church door," said Roche, "But when they see the tangible, visible benefit of helping people then it all starts clicking. It's for our benefit that we should be doing it. If you come out a half-dozen times I'll guarantee you'll experience reconciliation between diverse people groups."

Gleaners are encouraged to take all the food they want back to their communities. They have the opportunity to benefit first from the work they do. Leftover food goes to agencies that feed the hungry like food banks, soup kitchens, assistance facilities, and shelters. "In Baltimore there's a small city of 27,000 people who live below the poverty line," said Roche, "In D.C. there are another 25,000. So within one hour driving time we have a good-sized city of over 50,000 that live below the poverty line. One third of all the homeless people are veterans who put their lives on the line for you and me, and they're wonderful workers," he said. "The burden is growing and hopefully our mission is to respond to it. The need is not getting smaller, it's getting bigger."

The gleaning season for WAGN starts with spinach on the Eastern Shore in May. July brings sweet corn and once summer really hits, cucumbers, bell peppers, and tomatoes. This year a farmer let them glean almost 400 watermelons. Tens of thousands of pounds of apples come from orchards in Maryland and Virginia, and this year for the first time WAGN forayed into Pennsylvania, gleaning peaches at a Stewartstown orchard. There are cabbages and broccoli to be picked, and fall brings collards and kale right up until Christmas if there are not major frosts, said Roche. He is hoping for some overwintered collards and kale in January and February this year.

And the sweet potatoes. "We'll probably do sweet potatoes through the winter for the first time," explained Roche, "because they're the most nutritious vegetable." WAGN's goal this year was one million pounds of fresh fruit and vegetables, and they had passed that by September "The only way we did it was sweet potatoes," he said The sweet potatoes come from Parker Farms, one of the largest vegetable operations in Maryland and the largest single donor to WAGN. They are culls from the wholesale vegetable operation's grading line, and arrive at a warehouse by the tractor load in bulk bins. The potatoes are sorted through and bagged by volunteers, then delivered on large trucks throughout the region. Each trailer load weights 39,600 pounds, and this fall WAGN was bagging a trailer load every Saturday.

All this work has not gone unrecognized in the Washington area. This fall WAGN was honored at the National Summit On Food Recovery with a Hero of Food Recovery award. Dan Glickman, Secretary of Agriculture, attended a gleaning session with the group. But George Roche focuses less on the recognition he has bought to the organization, and more what he sees as the bigger picture

He says, "It gives us an opportunity to offer to people something we in agriculture and close to the land take for granted; that we are one nation under God."

Tomatoes are loaded into boxes to be distributed. Volunteers are encourage to take as much food back to their communities as wanted.

Christmas Bayberry: A Holiday Favorite

Northern bayberry, Myrica pensylvanica, is a fast-growing shrub used in the landscape. This versatile native plant was introduced in 1752. Northern Bayberry bears scented, waxy fruit on female plants. The waxy coating on the fruit is aromatic. When removed from the fruit, it is used in finely-crafted "Christmas" candles.

Northern bayberry has semi-evergreen upright stems. Each plant produces a rounded top and fairly dense growth. Its size can vary, but a good average height is about nine feet. Its height generally equals its spread, and as the plant gets older it needs more room. the plant will tend to colonize an area with suckers that need periodic thinning to control overall plant size.

Bayberry has a leaf shape similar to laurel. The actual size of Myrica foliage can be up to 4-inches long and an inch wide. Leaf color is a lustrous dark green above, and both leaf surfaces are only slightly pubescent (hairy).

Another unique quality of the leaf is that it is aromatic when brushed or crushed. Even the slightest contact with the plant releases the pleasant spicy, sweet aroma. There is no real fall color to the foliage, since it will retain a green color well into the fall before it drops.

The flowers on the plant are small and greenish and of little value, even though they appear in late March or early April before the new crop of foliage. However, the plants are generally dioecious, which means there are male and female specimens. The female plants, when supplied with pollen from a male plant, will produce a very attractive fruit.

The dense and durable fruit covers the stems. bayberry fruit is actually a drupe that is botanically equal to a cherry, peach or plum. Each bayberry fruit, however is only about 1/6 inch in diameter and quite hard. The unique part of the fruit is the grayish white waxy coating over the inner seed. People find the fruit interesting both for this coating and for its color, which contrasts with its surroundings.

The fruit on bayberry bushes becomes visible on the plant in September and may remain on the stems until the following spring. A wide variety of birds have been reported to use the fruit as a food source during the winter months.

Bayberry is adaptable to many soil types. It thrives well in poor, sterile, sandy soil conditions where it is found naturally along the coast of the eastern states from maryland up into newfoundland. Many attractive specimens are seen along the rocky coast of Maine.

The plant also performs well in heavy clay soil and tolerates full sun or half shade. Along the coast, the plant can withstand salt spray from the ocean, a tolerance which suggest a possible use along highways.

Bayberry is excellent for mass planting in groups, borders or combining with broadleaf evergreens. It will respond well to periodic pruning of older stems to keep a fuller form. In addition to all its other advantages the versatile Bayberry plant has no serious insect or disease problems.

For Northern areas, use only plants grown from Northern seed sources. Plant seeds in Fall after cleaning off their waxy coating.

CYFERNet Brings 'Web' Of Resources To Migrant Families

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Through the resources of Penn State, a one-of-a-kind project allows migrant farm worker families in Chester County to bring the world of the World Wide Web to their fingertips.

The project, which offers free access to Internet sites, is called CYFERNet, which stands for Children, Youth, and Family Electronic Resources. The project is a cooperative venture of federal and state governments working with trained community leaders, 4-H staff, and volunteers.

CYFERNet allows "a real opportunity to bring the resources of the Penn State Ag and Extension Education down to a community-based classroom," said Laurie Szoke, Chester County 4-H coordinator.

Chester County has many migrant farm families who are essential to the agricultural economic base. "Without migrant families, there would be no mushroom industry," said Szoke.

As a result, 4-H members involved in any program have access to the project, funded through a partnership with USDA, Penn State, Avon-Grove Library, and the Avon Grove Youth-Serving Coalition.

Two computers with Internet access have been installed in Chester County to provide young people and their families an opportunity to learn computer skills with a specific focus on the Internet. CYFERNet will address educational opportunities, literacy, and character development through existing community programs.

Already, CYFERNet has proven successful. One user is a teenager named Yolanda, 16, who went onto the Internet through CYFERNet for the first time. According to Szoke, Yolanda was interested in the Mexico culture and the fate of its famous popular singer, Selena, who was killed a few years ago. Yolanda wants to study secretarial science, though Szoke said the teen would be a "good spokesperson for any organization."

A migrant farm worker by the name of Raul, in his late 20s, expressed an interest in learning to improve his English language skills and wants to help improve his overall education, looking toward other opportunities, with CYFERNet.

Two 4-H photography club members, Janette and Juan, are using CYFERNet to learn more about 4-H leadership. The members are teen volunteers with Lynn Aldan, a teacher in the Chester County Migrant Education Program at Avon Grove Elementary School.

Szoke said the community would benefit because the children have a unique opportunity. "Young people can learn some good character-building ethics using the system," she said.

Toni Stuetz, extension agent/youth in Chester County, is developing a 4-H project book on how to use the CYFERNet system.

The book can provide a key for other, similar projects for youth organizations that want to use the Internet.

For more information about CYFERNet, contact Laurie Szoke, Chester County extension office, (610) 696-3500.

More Than A Cook Book

MORGANTOWN (Berks Co.) — The Conestoga Mennonite Church published a book titled THE JOYS OF SHARING. The 178-page book features recipes, memories, traditions, favorite Bible verses, craft ideas and a special children's section.

Church members, relatives and friends helped to make this book a successful fund-raiser by sharing their ideas. All proceeds will be contributed to the building fund for a new church. The book cost is $10. If you are interested in a copy stop by the church office, ask a church member or send an extra $3 for shipping and handling made payable to the Conestoga Mennonite Church Building Fund and send it to Conestoga Mennonite Church, 2769 Main Street, Morgantown, PA 19543, ATTN: THE JOYS OF SHARING (610) 286-9124.

Here are examples suitable for the season:

Holiday Simmering Spices

6 (3-inch) cinnamon sticks
2 Tblsp. whole allspice
1 whole nutmeg
¼ cup whole cloves
water

Put spices in a simmering crock, old teakettle, or pan. Cover with water and heat slowly. Add water as necessary to keep mixture moist. Reuse as desired.

-Sharon Stoltzfus

Hunting Tip

Make sure you have shells in your gun's chamber before firing at your game!

-Marlin Petersheim, age 13

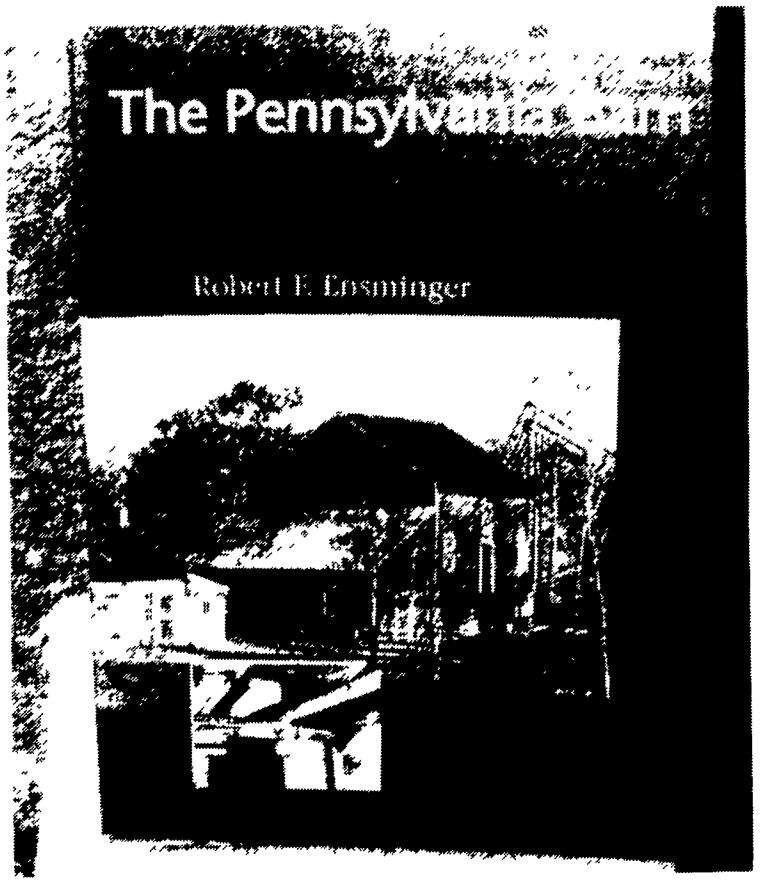
Baked Oatmeal

¼ cup cooking oil
½ cup sugar
1 egg
1½ cups quick oats
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ cup milk

Cream oil, sugar and egg together. Add all other ingredients and mix. Pour into greased 8-inch square pan. Bake for 30 minutes. Serve with milk. Makes 4 to 5 servings. Variations: Add ¼ cup raisins, ¼ cup nuts and ½ tsp. cinnamon. Line bottom of baking pan with sliced apples.

-Janie Stauffer

Book Review



The Pennsylvania Barn is easy reading but has all the marks of a well-documented history book. A large number of barn pictures and layout charts from the origin of the barns in Europe to local present landmarks fill the 238-page paperback.

The author is Robert F. Ensminger, associate professor of geography, emeritus, at Kutztown University. He is well-known for his presentations on the subject, most recently at the Mennonite Historical Society meeting in Strasburg last month.

The book is published by The Johns Hopkins University Press in Baltimore, Md. in cooperation with the Center for American Places, Harrisonburg, Va. The book takes the history of Pennsylvania barns from their origin through the evolutionary process. It includes the distribution of the barns through the years and takes a look at how barns are now being preserved by turing them into homes.

In The Pennsylvania Barn, Robert Ensminger provides the first comprehensive study of an important piece of American vernacular architecture — the forebay bank barn, better known as the Pennsylvania barn or the Pennsylvania German barn. He offers a detailed examination of the Swiss prototype and the evolution, distribution, and future of this agricultural structure in North America.

The cost is $22.95 and available from The Johns Hopkins University Press, 2715 N. Charles St., Baltimore, MD 21218-4319 or your local book store.

How Other Families Spend Their Money

RUTGERS, N.J. — Every so often, people call Rutgers Cooperative Extension to obtain information about how typical families spend their money. Some people are just plain curious while others want to compare their spending patterns with other households. Fortunately, household spending data are readily available and are updated frequently to reflect current living costs.

According to The Statistical Abstract of the United States (1995), average annual expenditures of U.S. households in 1993 totaled $30,692. Of this amount, the following amounts were spent on these specific household expenses:

- Housing (including utilities): $9,636 (31.4 percent)
- Transportation: $5,452 (17.8 percent)
- Food Eaten at Home: $2,735 (8.9 percent)
- Pensions and Social Security: $2,509 (8.2 percent)
- Health Care: $1,776 (5.8 percent)
- Clothing: $1,676 (5.5 percent)
- Food Away From Home: $1,664 (5.4 percent)
- Alcohol and Tobacco Products: $536 (1.7 percent)
- Personal (e.g., Life) Insurance: $399 (1.3 percent)
- Other Expenses: $4,308 (14 percent)

Surprised at these figures? Remember that they are national averages and reflect different living costs throughout the U.S.

4-H Horse Club Members Ride Into Spotlight At State Horse Show

The competition gave 4-H'ers an opportunity to display their horsemanship and sportsmanship skills.

The state show culminates the year for approximately 7,500 Pennsylvania 4-H members enrolled in the horse and pony 4-H clubs. To be eligible for this show, 4-H'ers had to advance through qualifying competitions at the county, regional, and district levels.

More than 800 winners from the county and district competitions vied for awards. Events tested skills in showmanship, equitation, pleasure, jumping, driving, and timed events.

The primary purpose of the state 4-H horse program is to develop life skills in youth and skills in horse management. Through competition, the 4-H'ers develop riding skills, gain self confidence, and learn proper care of animals.

Ashley Richardson, Denver, won first place in saddle seat equitation junior division and second place in saddle seat pleasure horses.

Vanessa Polk, Gilbertsville, with Hear About Hawks Hyacinths, won miniature horses first place filly of this year.

Lancaster Society 8

LANCASTER - Farm Women Society 8 met on November 12 at the home of Kathryn Hess in Mount Joy. Miriam Greider gave devotions. A delicious afternoon tea given by Mary Sweigart was enjoyed by all. Additional hostesses were Ruth Newcomer, Billie Hawbaker, Christine Hufnell, and Kathryn Hess. The December meeting will be at the home of Sylvia Kuch in Elizabethtown.

Farm Women Societies

Berks Society 6

Berks County Farm Women Group #6 held its meeting for November at the home of Janet Schlegel. The project for the evening was making Christmas favors for Meals on Wheels.

Marian Gehris, Beth Glick, Pearl Hoffman, and Ilona Houp helped with bingo at Berks Heim last month. A donation was also given to Berks Heim's "Santa's Corner" for Christmas.

Committees for 1998 were appointed as follows: Sunshine, Marian Gehris and Barb Kelchner; Program, Ilona Houp and Pearl Hoffman; and Scrapbook, Janet Schlegel and Beth Glick. The next meeting will be our Christmas party at the Pleasantville Hotel.

Lancaster Society 18

Farm Women Society held their meeting Nov. 15 in the home of Carol Fetzer, daughter of member Elizabeth Greider. 22 members and guests attended. President Roberta Shepherdson presided. Martha Stover conducted devotions. Roll call was answered by memories of experiences with our grandparents. Many shoe boxes are already filled with toys, games, school supplies, and garments to be given to needy children as Christmas gifts in December.

The program given by Mary Agnes and titled "The Best Bag Lady in Pennsylvania". Her costume was typical of clothes gathered from "trash barrels". Many members were costumed from the speakers "bags" in home decorated "trash barrel hats", scarves, etc. They were presented with a snapshot to see the results. Amusing sayings were often interrupted by one of her own songs composed by Mary. She also led group singing of familiar hymns. There was much laughter but while the program was comedy, many times one became aware of the sad fact that in reality "bag ladies" are a group of unnumbered, unloved, homeless members of our county "living" in boxes, etc.

We should be aware with true Thanksgiving of the churches of Lancaster which serve one meal a day to those unfortunate ones, thus giving them one bright hour in their dismal lives.

After a short business meeting, the birthday wish song, the Farm Women's Theme Song and "Brighten The Corner Where You Are", the meeting was dismissed.

Improving THE BOTTOM LINE

Master Mix Feeds has helped us approach an 18,000 RHA on 150 Jerseys. Our Master Mix Feeds nutritionists have shown us they understand our goals and have helped us fine tune our feeding program. We're very proud of reaching this level of production, and are looking to the future and ways to economically increase our production even more. Our Master Mix Feeds representatives have consistently shown us their interest, commitment and availability to working with us to identify and solve areas of concern as they arise.

Jim and Sharon Osborn, Queen Acres Farm, Union Bridge, MD.

PERFORMANCE UPDATE!

Queen Acres Boomer Celeste, has set the all time United States Jersey production record! Her 6-7 365 day production record is an incredible 38,030 mil, 1,732 fat and 1,333 protein! What an incredible record!

The Osborne's RHA for their 115 cow Jersey herd is currently at 18,895 milk, 704 fat, and 871 protein. This places them sixth in the nation for protein, seventh for milk and tenth for fat for herds between 80 and 149 cows!

Master Mix Feeds is proud to be a part of such a successful operation, and wish the Osborne's continued success.

District Welcomes Donahue

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Chester County Conservation District welcomes Suzanna C. Donahue to its staff. Donahue received her bachelor's degree in environmental resource management from Penn State and is working toward a master's degree from the University of Delaware.

While in school, she worked for the City of Newark Water and Waste Water Department and interned at Water Resources Agency for New Castle County.

As part of the district staff, Donahue will be assisting landowners with conservation planning and implementation for Chester County's Agricultural Preservation Program. She is training under the direction of the Natural Resources Conservation Service, USDA.

Teachers Learn On Tour

WARREN (Warren Co.) — Seventeen Warren County teachers signed up for a recent bus tour workshop offered as part of the countywide in-service program.

The bus tour was arranged in cooperation with the Warren County Soil Conservation District (WCSCD), the USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS), and the North Jersey Resource Conservation and Development Council (RC&D). The tour highlighted agriculture, explaining the conservation practices and new technology farmers are implementing on their farms to reduce nonpoint source (NPS) pollution and improve water quality in the Musconetcong Watershed.

NPS pollution comes from lawn fertilizer, sewage, agricultural chemicals and animal waste in surface runoff into streams, rivers, and groundwater.

The first stop of the day was at Donaldson Farms and Greenhouses on Allen Road in Mansfield where Dan Jones, district conservationist, and Christine Washer, soil conservationist, both with the NRCS, began to explain the conservation efforts the Donaldsons have appliled to their farm operation. Much to the delight of the teachers, Lew Donaldson, the patriarch of the Donaldson clan, piled everyone into a hay wagon pulled by a tractor and gave a tour of the farm.

The cloudless, sunny sky made the view breathtaking as the teachers were able to see up close the practices of drip irrigation, contour farming and erosion control practices like stone waterways and terraces. Greg Donaldson, Lew's youngest son, pointed how these practices reduce soil erosion and improve water quality.

The next stop on the bus tour, took the teachers to Skip Smith's farm in Broadway. John Metrick, soil conservationist with NRCS, described the importance of waste management in reducing NPS pollution. At the same farm, Brian Aldrich, agricultural outreach specialist with the RC&D, discussed the economical and environmental benefits of balancing the nitrogen inputs with the farm's crop needs.

The teachers were treated to a buffet lunch at the Warren Grange in Broadway. They listened to Bill Tietjen, county agricultural agent, and Carol Ward, county 4-H agent, both with Rutgers Cooperative Extension, discussing the programs offered through extension.

After lunch, the bus unloaded at a fishing access area owned by the Division of Fish, Game & Wildlife along the Musconetcong River. Tim Dunne, resource conservationist with NRCS, spoke about the importance of knowing which watershed you live in and wildlife habitat among riparian stream buffers. A riparian stream buffer is an area of vegetation, such as trees or shrubs, growing along a river or stream that removes excess nutrients and sediment from surface runoff. Riparian stream buffers also provide shade which can control water temperatures and improve wildlife habitat.

Patricia Hamilton, senior fisheries biologist with the Division of Fish, Game & Wildlife, discussed how invertebrates and fish are a good indicator of the water quality of a stream or river. She had the teachers conduct a series of experiments, such as finding temperature and pH levels of the water and catch some of the critters the fish feed on. A few of the teachers climbed into some wading boots and headed into the river. Others simply took off their shoes and socks and walked right in.

The last stop on the tour brought the teachers to an alfalfa field on Joel Schnetzer's farm in Asbury. Sue Jones, an integrated pest management program associate with Rutgers Cooperative Extension, discussed integrated crop management (ICM) and integrated pest management (IPM). Both IPM and ICM involve scouting fields for insects and weeds. Once a field reaches a specific threshold for a species, Jones will make a recommendation on how pesticides or herbicides to apply to the crop. This essentially will prevent farmers from over or under applying the chemicals. Both programs have an economic and environmental benefit in that they improve water quality and help the farmer to determine his/her exact chemical needs.

As the teachers sat down in their seats for the ride back to the WCSCD, Duane Copley, the district's manager, discussed farmland preservation activities in the Musconetcong River Valley. Donna Drewes, coordinator of the RC&D, told the teachers about the Musconetcong Watershed being a limestone valley. She discussed the abundance of sinkholes in the valley and steps the cooperating partners have taken to protect this unique geologic area.

All who participated gave an overwhelmingly good response when asked if they enjoyed the day.

"The tour was very informative and helpful," said Alice Bechok from Warren County Special Services.

As the bus stopped at its return destination, on the warm, Indian-summer afternoon, the teachers were given a comprehensive packet of informational and educational activities, along with a resource guide with all the speakers' names and phone numbers and a Warren County Soil Survey.

BUSINESS ◆ NEWS

Mickelsen Joins Semex USA

MADISON, Wis. — Semex USA has announced the addition of Wendell Mickelsen as a direct herd salesmen.

Mickelsen, who had worked as a sales trainer for Semex USA East, replaces Dwight Martin of Ephrata. Martin was appointed by his local school board to a teaching position this fall. His successful career in the Al industry ended on a high note this summer as he became one of the top 10 Semex distributors in the country.

Mickelsen has been in the dairy industry all his life. He was born in Utah and raised on the Utah State Dairy Farm, where his father was the herd manager.

After graduation from Utah State with an agri business degree, Mickelsen spent a number of years working in the Al industry as a direct herd salesman, a district sales manager, and also as an evaluator for various Al mating programs.

He has travel extensively around the country and worked with all kinds of dairy operations. He brought this experience to Semex, where he worked briefly as a trainer for other sales representatives.

As his own hoof trimming business rapid expanded, Mickelsen was forced to devote his time solely to that. Now, as his work team grows, Mickelsen was able to rejoin Semex and fill in as the new direct herd representative. Customers in Lebanon, northern Lancaster, and northern Chester counties saw uninterrupted Semex service.

New Holland Adds Compact Tractors

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The new 25- and 30-series Boomer™ compact tractors from New Holland share the styling, serviceability, and construction of the larger New Holland Genesis™ tractors. They are manufactured in a new factory at Dublin, Ga., which was built specifically to manufacture compact tractors.

On farms the Boomers are maneuverable choretime machines with front-end loaders and blades. They have ample power and hydraulics to handle sicklebar and rotary mowers, side-delivery rakes, windrow inverters, trailers, and snow blowers. Their compact size lets them mow yards, too.

The Boomers offer fingertip controls, high-capacity live hydraulics, unmatched serviceability, and tight-turn SuperSteer™ FWD front axles. All are powered by 3-cylinder diesels, feature hydrostatic power steering and have wet-disc brakes.

The 25 (engine) hp Model 1530 is available with cruise control hydrostatic or 9x3 gear drive transmission, 2WD and FWD with SuperSteer™ front axle. Like the Model 1630, the "1530" has a swivel seat to view backhoe or other rear implement operations.

The Model 1630 is powered by a 27.3 hp engine with similar drive options, SuperSteer FWD plus cruise control on hydrostatic drive units. Like the "1530", it offers a 2000 RPM midpoint PTO in addition to the rear 540 live PTO, deluxe headlights for wrap-around lighting and optional deluxe 3-point hitch with flexible link ends for easy implement attachment.

The new Model 1725 is powered by a 29 hp diesel and is available as 2WD and FWD with 9x3 gear transmission.

The Model 1925 is powered by a 34 hp diesel and is available with hydrostatic with live PTO or 9x3 gear-drive transmission, 540 PTO, 3-point hitch and FWD.

Factory installed fixed or folding ROPS are available on all Boomer tractors.

Gehl Offers Skid Loader Replica

WEST BEND, Wis. — Gehl Company announces a new 1/25th scale model replica of the Gehl SL 5635 DXT Series skid loader. This new replica represents one of the new 35 series skid loaders introduced by Gehl for 1997.

The scale model features die cast construction, moveable bucket, load arms and wheels, detailed design, authentic decals, and colorful individualized packaging. Manufactured by Die-Cast Promotions, the scale model will be available in late November through authorized Gehl dealers.

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

Pennfield Buys Kintner Milling

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — On Nov. 24, Pennfield Corporation announced the purchase of Kintner Milling Compnay, South Montrose.

Ray Lehr, senior vice president, Ag Products Division, said that Kintner Milling will be operated as a division of Pennfield Corporation. The combined forces of Pennfield and Kintner Milling are better positioned to service growth opportunities faster and more effectively.

This acquisition demonstrates Pennfield's commitment to meeting the needs of dairy producers in the Mid-Atlantic region. The purchase of Kintner Milling is the second step of Pennfield's aggressive growth plan to better serve the dairy producers in northern Pennsylvania and the state of New York.

Bill Kintner Sr. purchased the mill in 1986 to consolidate his feed business from Meshoppen. In the time the Kintner family owned the feed mill, they were able to double the tonnage.

The majority of the feed sales today are bulk, while the mill also offers bagged feeds and ingredients for sale. Also located at the mill site is a retail store where miscellaneous farming needs can be purchased. Pennfield plans to relocate its Canton warehouse to the new South Montrose location.

Snider's Elevator Hosts Open House

LEMASTERS (Franklin Co.) –Recently Snider's Elevator Inc., a feed and grain mill, hosted its 2nd annual open house and guided tours at the Lemasters facility.

More than 1,000 people attended the festivities, which included a free pancake breakfast and free lunch, door prizes, and a 10 percent off sale.

Snider's Elevator, a manufacturer of dairy, horse, and livestock feeds, serves Washington County, Maryland, and Franklin County, Pennsylvania, and surrounding areas. Snider's Elevator, a family owned and operated business since 1929, started in Williamson. Snider's Elevator acquired the Lemasters facility 11 years ago. Now Snider's Elevator Inc. is headquartered at the Lemasters location.

Under a tent, vendors from 20 different major manufacturers greeted guests and answered questions. Vendors gave out product samples and brochures. Also, Snider's Elevator hosted local certified journeyman farrier Sharon Hanna. While pounding out horse shoes, Hanna explained her profession. Miniature horses from Harmony Hill and South Lawn Stables put smiles on the faces of children and adults.

Customers gathered around "Taz", the Mercersburg Narcotics Detection Dog, and K-9 Officer William Sheppard. They demonstrated Taz's ability to search a vehicle and detect hidden drugs.

A 1902 original Abbott Downing stage coach was on display. During the 1950s, it was featured in movies, such as "Gun Smoke." Owned by R.H. Morgan Lumber Company, the stage coach was on loan to Snider's Elevator Inc. for their open house. Authentically restored by owner Ramon Morgan, the coach hauled mail through Texas, Southern California, and New Mexico for the Butterfield Stage Company. Also, it was used by this company to carry passengers, so that the trips were more profitable. Four or six part-draft horses (used for their speed as well as muscle) were used to pull the stage coach. The stage coach was purchased from a private museum in New England.

Customers gathered at the dairy nutrionists tables to learn about new dairy feed technologies, and to gain fresh insight into the farm industry. Snider's Elevator dairy feed nutrionists Rick Ruppert and Mark Potter attended the open house to discuss their roll as full service Master Mix technicians. Also on hand, Southern States dairy nutritionist Harry Walker, and Equine Feed and Tech Rep. Heather Heider. White Oak Mills representative Staci Barnett was present, as well as Renaissance Nutrionists Jon Reifsnider and Doug Adams to explain their consulting services. The nutrionists make farm calls and design custom rations for each particular herd of cows.

Snider's Elevator then receives cow feed rations from the nutritionists, and uses the rations to manufacture feed. The nutrionists use computers to formulate the feed rations. Each ration is tailored to suit the animals needs.

Open house attendees had an opportunity to tour the Snider's Elevator facility. Tours included the grain receiving department and then the mill, where the stored grain gets processed into finished feed. Snider's Elevator manufactures feed for a variety of animals including dairy and beef cows, horses, hogs, chickens, sheep, and goats.

Snider's Elevator Inc., a feed and grain mill in Lemasters, hosted as many as 20 vendors during their 2nd annual open house. Participating vendors traveled from as far away as Florida to make Snider's Elevator open house a success. Pictured here are, front, Tom Sempowski, Bradley Caldwell, rep. Left, Kevin Miller and Marion Weston of Fort Dodge Animal Health. Jim Bradley, C.E.O. of Bradley Caldwell Inc., Steve Wright, Regional sales manager for Durvet Inc., Susan Snider, marketing manager of Snider's Elevator Inc. and Orville Wolters, sales representative for Trophy Animal Health.

DowElanco Changes Name

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Dow AgroSciences will be the new name for DowElanco, company officials announced in a move reflecting the venture's new status as a wholly owned subsidiary of The Dow Chemical Company. The name change will be effective Jan. 1.

"As a new name, Dow AgroScience reflects Dow's belief that science and technology are critical to helping the agricultural industry grow to meet the needs of our world's expanding population," said William S. Stavropoulos, president and CEO of The Dow Chemical Company. "During the next two decades, world agriculture will change dramatically, and Dow AgroSciences will help lead the agricultural industry's efforts to initiate, shape and direct this transformation."

DowElanco's name change follows a June announcement by The Dow Chemical Company that it would acquire Eli Lilly and Company's 40 percent interest in the joint venture. The two companies had joined their plant science businesses to form DowElanco in 1989.

A U.S.-based company with more than $2 billion in annual sales, DowElanco researches, develops, manufactures and markets a wide range of products for enhancing global crop production and urban pest management customers and markets.

DowElanco is also majority owner of the biotechnology venture Mycogen, which researches, develops and markets genetically enhanced, insect-resistant crops. DowElanco and Mycogen are collaborating on a wide range of research projects targeted at developing enhanced crops for a variety of higher value end uses.

"Agriculture is an industry that is rapidly reinventing itself," said John Hagaman, DowElanco president and CEO. "Our new name, Dow AgroSciences, reflects a broad sense of our mission that has been inherent in our strategic planning for a number of years. As a result, our company's investment in technologies of the future is funded and supported by traditional pest control products, so that both our older and newer businesses provide a platform for growth.

"In the years ahead, global agriculture will need to be able to support sustainably a world population in excess of eight billion people," said Hagaman. "Our mission as a company is to develop and commercialize the technologies needed to make that happen."

DowElanco's website can be accessed at http://www.dowela co.com.

Waste Milk

The question of using waste milk is one that is asked frequently. Waste milk is that milk that is unsaleable due to mastitis or treatment with antibiotics. It is often considered a free source of liquid to feed to calves.

Waste milk can be an excellent source of feed for calves. It has the nutrition of whole milk and can't be used for other purposes, so why not use it? Well, in many cases, it is an excellent feed and can replace whole milk or milk replacer. But, before using waste milk for young calves, there are a few precautions you should take.

Don't use waste milk from the first milking after antibiotic treatment — this milk contains too much antibiotic and may lead to residue problems from the antibiotic in the milk. This may be a very important problem if you're feeding bull calves prior to sending them to market. If you're feeding replacement heifers, this shouldn't be a problem, but be careful.

Don't use milk that is excessively bloody or unusual in appearance. This milk probably contains active pathogens, disease fighting white blood cells and other stuff that might not be digested well by a calf's sensitive digestive system. If it looks bad, don't feed it!

Don't feed waste milk to group housed calves. Some research indicates that group calves that suck on each other after drinking waste milk might infect each other with the pathogens in the treated milk.

Don't use milk from cows infected with E. Coli or Pasteurella. These bacteria might still be in the milk you feed the calf and can possibly infect the calf's intestine, leading to disease.

The opportunity cost of waste milk is significant. What is opportunity cost? It is the value of the milk if it wasn't wasted. Think of it as the loss you're sustaining by producing waste milk. Let's consider an example. If that milk wasn't "waste" — unsaleable — it should be going into the tank. Let's assume that it's worth $12/cwt. That's your opportunity cost. If you're normally feeding whole milk, the waste milk you produce is simply replacing the whole milk you would otherwise feed. The opportunity cost is zero. If you normally feed a milk replacer, the opportunity cost is different. Let's say you're feeding 10 pounds of waste milk to each calf per day (cost + $1.20) and you replace 1 pound of milk replacer (cost $0.80), then the "opportunity cost" of the waste milk is $0.40 per calf per day. Remember, this isn't an actual cash cost, but it's the money you're losing by producing milk you can't sell. Therefore, it's important to consider the reasons for that waste milk and try to minimize the amount you produce. Every dairy producer will have some waste milk on occasion. If you follow the precautions above, it can be an effective source of nutrients for young calves.

Direct Marketing Facility

The Maryland Small Farmers Cooperative opened its Direct Marketing Facility in Woodsboro on Tuesday, Sept. 16 to receive and ship dairy and beef producers' cull cows and fed cattle directly to the processing plant.

By establishing the facility, producers are able to reduce their cost of marketing. Producers may deliver their livestock to the Woodsboro facility (located in the former Kola Herd Sale Barn on Route 550 just West of Woodsboro) Tuesdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The producers are paid on a hanging weight and grade basis. Checks are mailed to the producers by the end of the week with deductions by the end of the week with deductions for transportation to the plant, $1 per head for the beef checkoff program, and $5 per head for administration.

Those producers not already members of the co-op are assessed a $25 annual membership fee with their first shipment.

The co-op was formed early this year to find ways of helping Maryland farmers improve their marketing opportunities and reduce costs. The direct marketing concept used in Woodsboro is modeled after the successful operation of a similar program established by the Young Adult Farmers in the Shippensburg area. That operation began 18 months ago and is handling 100 head of cattle per day with two day a week operation.

Further information about the Woodsboro facility can be obtained by contacting John Jorgensen, Livestock Group Chairman of the Small Farmers Cooperative, at (301) 831-1000. The Woodsboro facility phone number is (301) 845-6232 and can be called on Tuesdays for information.

Value Of Alternative Grains

When additional energy and protein are required, corn and soybean meal commonly form the basis of the grain portion of most sheep diets.

However, when justified by supply or price, other grains may replace all or part of the corn and soybean meal in a diet. The energy values of certain small grains such as barley, oats, and wheat are 90, 80, and 100 percent of corn respectively.

Barley can replace up to 100 percent of the corn in a diet, while oats can replace 50 to 100 percent of the corn in a diet. The higher replacement rate for oats is used for breeding sheep, while the lower rate is used in creep feeds and finishing diets for lambs.

Because the carbohydrate fraction of wheat is so highly digestible, wheat can only be used to replace up to 50 percent of the corn in a diet. Alternative sources of protein to replace soybean meal include cottonseed meal, peanut meal, corn gluten feed, and dry distillers grains. To determine if other feeds are a better value than corn or soybean meal, comparisons can be made based on the cost per unit of nutrient.

If corn is selling for $0.06 per pound and barley is selling for $0.05 per pound, is barley a better buy even though it has 90 percent of the energy value of corn? To determine which is the better buy, divide $0.06 per pound by 92 percent TDN for corn to get a value of $0.065 per pound of TDN. Divide $0.05 per pound by 85 percent TDN for barley to get a value of $0.059 per pound of TDN. In this example, even though barley has a lower energy value than corn, it is still a better buy.

If alfalfa hay is selling for $120 a ton and soybean meal is selling for $250 a ton, which is a better buy for crude protein? Diivide $0.06 per pound by 15 percent crude protein for alfalfa hay to get a value of $0.40 per pound of crude protein. Divide $0.125 per pound by 44 percent crude protein for soybean meal to get $0.284 per pound of crude protein. Divide $0.125 per pound by 44 percent crude protein for soybean meal to $0.284 per pound of crude protein. In this example, even though alfalfa hay is selling for less than half the price of soybean meal, soybean meal is still a better buy for crude protein than alfalfa hay. Caution should be used when substituting alternative feeds for corn and soybean meal when they appear to be a better value. Although alternative feeds may be comparable in nutrients analysis, the animals may not perform similarly. Therefore, it is important to know if there are problems with certain alternative feeds, and to monitor the performance of the sheep flock once changes have been made.

Herd Health In Late Pregnancy

Herd health programs attempt to organize all the information applicable to goat herd health into a concise, simple-to-remember and usable form.

The goal of a herd health program is to improve the herd's productivity. This goal is achieved through nutrition management, disease control, reproductive management, parasite, control mangement, and environmental management.

Careful records must be kept in order to know where the program has been, how it is progressing and what to do in the future to make it better.

Each herd is unique and requires that its program be tailored to fit the needs and goals of that herd.

Late Pregnancy And The Dry Doe

This period of time is so important to the future of the herd, and offers opportunities to institute many aspects of a herd health program.

The pregnant doe should have a 40-60 day dry period in order to regain condition lost during lactation, allow the mammary gland to rest and for the doe to get ready for kidding and the next lactation. At drying off, treat all udders with dry cow mastitis antibiotics. This is important, even though the udder has been healthy throughout the last lactation. Many new udder infections begin during the first several weeks of the dry period. Dip teats daily with an approved teat dip until the udder begins involution.

The dry period is an ideal time to deworm. Internal parasites experience increased activity during late pregnancy and this is called the pre-parturient rise. More parasites can then be eliminated if the doe is dewormed at this time. Don't forget to check for external parasites and treat if any are found.

Parasite control at this time helps prevent levels of parasite exposure to the newborn, as well as helping the doe.

Late pregnancy is also an ideal time to give the yearly booster doses of the vaccines that are utilized in that herd. The vaccines will give protection to the doe, as well as ensure high levels of antibodis in the doe's colostrum for the newborn kid's protection. The vaccines used depend upon the problems and needs within each individual herd, but should include enterotoxemia and tetanus.

Nutritionally, the dry period is a critical time. The metabolic and physiological needs are demanding. This is a rebuilding time for the doe, getting her ready for the demands of her next lactation. The developing fetus (es) grow rapidly during the last several weeks of gestation, thus greatly increasing the metabolic demands on the doe.

The most common problem seen during this dry period is allowing the doe to become overconditioned. Over-conditioning puts excessive stress on the heavily pregnant doe and predisposes her to serious metabolic problems, one of which is ketosis.

The excessive abdominal fat and pregnant uterus reduce the holding capacity of the doe's rumen, preventing her from being able to consume enough feed to meet her needs, as well as the needs of the fetus. Subsequently, to meet her needs she begins to metabolize her fat reserves and potentially may develop ketosis.

It is important during the early dry period to provide good quality

Agway Focused On Growth, Profitability

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Agway farmer-members met at the Hotel Syracuse in Syracuse, N.Y. recently to take part in the cooperative's 33rd Annual Meeting.

In his report to member-stockholders, Donald P. Cardarelli, Agway's president and chief executive officer, said that "fiscal year 1997 was a year of significant progress for Agway." The agricultural cooperative previously announced net earnings for the 12 months ended June 30, 1997 of $10.7 million, on total sales of $1.67 billion. This compares with fiscal year 1996 net earnings of $12.7 million, on total sales of $1.66 billion.

In fiscal 1997, the Company realized record unit sales in a number of product lines including seed units, fertilizer tons, formula feed tons, custom acres applied and agricultural leasing volume which helped offset lower sales in product lines affected by the mild winter and businesses that were sold in the previous year.

All Agway businesses, with the exception of Agway Agricultural Products (AAP), showed a profit for the year. Operating results in the seven regional AAP Enterprises were substantially better than last year. However, the cost of goods sold in feed and feed ingredients were significantly higher than last year and resulted in AAP's loss for the year.

"We remain focused on doing two things: growing each of our businesses and improving the profitability of our farmer-members," said Cardarelli. "We are very optimistic about our future and we look forward to a stronger performance in the 1998 fiscal year."

As part of this year's annual meeting, Agway members participated in two farm seminars aimed at improving farm management skills. The seminars were: "Precision Farming: Where in the World Are We?" and "Dry Cow Management: Research and Application." Agway members also attended Cavalcade, Agway's semiannual retailing trade show, at the On-Center in Syracuse.

Agway members also elected five farmers to three-year terms on the 15-member Agway board of directors. They are: Ralph H. Heffner, Pine Grove, Pa.; Jeffrey B. Martin, Cazenovia, N.Y.; Samuel F. Minor, Washington, Pa.; Gary K. Van Slyke, Pike, N.Y.; and Edwin C. Whhitehead, Washington Depot, Ct.

Founded in 1964, Agway, Inc. is an agricultural cooperative owned by 80,000 Northeast farmer-members.

roughage to ensure active, normal rumen function. During this brief period the doe's metabolic needs are minimal and the hay will be adequate to meet her energy needs; but 2-3 weeks before freshening, her metabolic needs begin to increase and she will require more concentrated forms of energy (grain). During this dry period, the doe should slowly gain in condition and weight. The quantity and quality of feed during the period will affect the doe and the kids throughout, at least, the next year. Not enough emphasis can be given to the tremendous importance of nutrition in any animal production unit.

Will Asia's Economic Dominoes Tumble On U.S. Agriculture?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Southeast Asia's recent economic troubles could be the flashpoint for longer-term effects that could hurt U.S. farmers, said agricultural economist Carl Zulauf of Ohio State University.

"This is a serious situation of which any informed American needs to be aware and watch for possible future consequences," Zulauf said.

The extent of that seriousness will depend on whether the crisis in Thailand, Malaysia, the Philippines and Indonesia spreads to East Asian countries that are major importers of U.S. farm products, Zulauf said. The latter are South Korea, Japan, and China.

Symptoms of Southeast Asia's troubles festered throughout 1997 with currency devaluations ranging from 13 percent to 34 percent in the above four countries. The value of South Korea's currency, the won, has also declined by 20 percent. Currency devaluations make U.S. farm products more expensive overseas, which could cut into trade.

Zulauf said the crisis is not just a change in currency values, but is a barometer of deeper, structural problems in Asia's long-touted "miracle" economies.

"Problems in economic activity always come from some place you didn't expect it," Zulaud said. "There was once unmitigated optimism in the Southeast Asian region."

The underlying troubles can be traced to the past decade when foreign investors optimistically poured money into Southeast Asia in anticipation of their future potential. The infusion of capital pushed growth rates in to the upper-single digits and lower-double digits, and some economists heralded the region as an emerging "tiger" economy.

The intense investsment activity overheated Southeast Asian economies, and by last summer, investors had lost faith in national currencies. This led to devaluations and stock market crashes through the latter half of 1997.

In addition, Japanese banks are exposed due to massive loans to the region. Add to that Japan's large debt problem left over from its economic boom of the 1980s.

"Americans still perceive Japan as an economic miracle," Zulauf said. "However, its economy has not performed well during the 1990s, and its government has not made the structural reforms that many experts say is needed."

Asia's economic problems stem from excess manufacturing capacity, Zulauf said. The region is producing more goods than the world market can absorb. When too few dollars chase too many goods, the result is deflation, or a drop in prices. Hence these countries have seen deflated prices for their manufactured goods.

"CEOs of major companies have been asking, 'What happens if this excess capacity comes on the market, and the demand isn't there to absorb it?'," Zulauf said.

The underlying economic problems may eventually hit Asians' pocketbooks by cutting into income growth and maybe even reducing their incomes. Consequently, their demand for foreign goods — including U.S. farm products — is expected to decline.

Zulauf said Asia's "rational response" to the economic conditions would be to "export their way" out of the excess manufacturing capacity. They would sell their products at reduced prices to U.S. consumers, and U.S. producers would be forced to lower their prices.

In the short term, a round of deflation would benefit consumers with lower prices, Zulauf said. However, deflation potentially hits company profits and lowers stock prices.

Asia's economic problems would hurt U.S. farmers, who havae greatly increased their exports to the region in this decade. For example, 32 percent of U.S. corn exports go to China and Japan; another 30 percent go elsewhere to Southeast and East Asian countries.

In addition, more than 40 percent of U.S. soybean exports and more than 50 percent of beef and pork exports ended up there as of 1996.

Zulauf said the above economic scenario is not for certain, and he hope it does not happen. "I would place a 10 percent to 20 percent probability on a significant impact on U.S. agriculture.'

"These odds may not seem high, but normally the odds of a significant positive or negative event are much lower than this."

What should farmers read in to Zulauf's scenario, which may or may not happen, or else may occur in some modified form? "My advice to farmers is to stay on top of the situation by collecting information and to get your costs of production in order."

It would take at least six months before any serious indicators appear, Zulauf said. U.S. agriculture could be hurt whether or not the most serious aspects occur because of its vulnerability to over seas developments.

"Farmers need to ask the question: 'How can I cut production costs, yet retain or enhance profitability?'," Zulauf said. "Remember, the farmers who survive in the long run have the lowest cost of production."

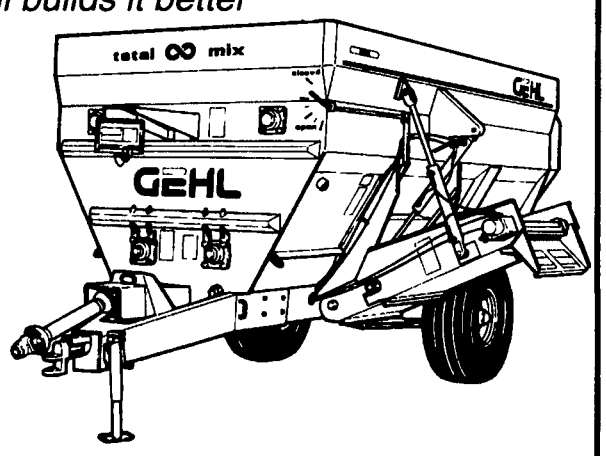
TMR "TOTAL MIX" MIXER FEEDER

Model 8210 With FREE 1500 Scale Monitor
210 Cu. Ft. Capacity
In Stock - Call for Details



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration

Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.

Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.

Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.

GEHL FINANCE OFFERS: $1300 Cash Discount - OR - Waiver till July 1, 1998 - OR - 0% for 12 months or 3.9% for 24 months or 4.9% for 36 months or 5.9% for 48 months.

SERIES 5000 LAGOON PUMPS & SPREADER TANKS

Here are two Van Dale Waste Handlers that really compliment each other. Start with the new Series 5000 Lagoon pump that will agitate and empty the biggest and toughest lagoons or pits faster than any other pump on the market.
Then check out the Van Dale Tank that meets your needs. In 2700 - 5500 gallon capacities. They feature a low uniform spread pattern. And with specially treated, corrosion-resistant 1/4" steel plate construction, backed by a 10-year warranty you won't have to worry about buying another tank for years and years and years!

THE VAN DALE ADVANTAGE

CHECK OUT THESE PUMP FEATURES
- Hydraulic Control from the Tractor Seat

The CLAAS® Quadrant 1200 square baler—The new standard equipment for commercial operators

CLAAS doesn't have to sell a commercial operator on the advantages he gets from large, densely-packed square bales

Yes, the Quadrant 1200 delivers the density commercial operators want Yes, its bales inhibit spoilage by keeping the air out Yes, they preserve quality because they minimize nutrient loss.

The 1200 also offers the high production capacities you demand Its 4 ft x 2-1/4 ft x up to 8 ft long bales effectively increase storage space and dramatically increase transport capacities—all at a high productivity rate And you know what this means to your bottom line

The Quadrant makes easy work of dry hay, haylage and silage crops—whatever you've got And it bales as much of it as you've got

CLAAS's shaft-driven knotters have earned a worldwide reputation for reliability and low maintenance Other notable features are its 3-stage pre-chamber, 78" wide pickup, powerful transmission, heavy-duty worm gear, 1000rpm pto, hydraulic density control, capacity for up to 24 balls of sisal or plastic twine, and of course 6 dependable CLAAS shaft-driven knotters

Production capacity Convenient handling and storage Economical transport Density and quality A better bottom line.

For more information about the Quadrant and how it can meet your commercial needs, contact the CLAAS dealer listed below

Incidently, CLAAS quality is also available in a smaller Quadrant model designed for dairy operators

FORAGE HARVESTER with CROP PROCESSOR™

Located directly behind the cutterhead cylinder, the Ctop Processor features a pair of high-speed grooved rolls that crack kernels, break up the cob and "condition" the stalk material. The rolls can be removed for chopping haylage.

The benefits of processed corn silage include increased milk production and higher digestibility. Processing prior to storage improves feed quality compared to processing after storage.

THE BIG ONE

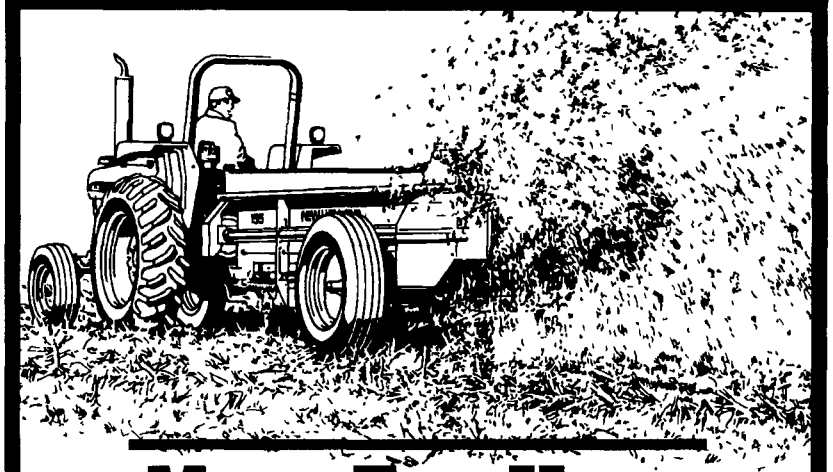
HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP

There's a skid-steer champ and its name is the Model L865 New Holland Super Boom™. The L865 is built tough all around so it's the most durable, reliable and powerful machine on the market.

It has a 60-horsepower, turbocharged diesel engine for the ultimate in power. And it has a massive 2,200-lb. operating load to pick up where all others leave off. Of course, it has the features you expect from New Holland, such as the best speed, stability, visibility, lift height and dump reach in the industry. Add that to the Pick Up 'n Go™ universal attachment system and there's nothing it can't handle. Stop by today and put the champ to work on your farm.

NEW HOLLAND

NO. 1 SPREADER



MADE FOR HARD WORK AND HEAVY LOADS

The choice of farmers in North America year after year. New Holland box spreaders can be counted on to do the heavy work that can't wait.

The Model 155 can handle up to 217 bushels on one load. The rugged A-frame hitch carries the load safely from below and does not pull it from the front.

Of course, you'll get sides and floor boards FREE for 12 years, if they fail. And only your New Holland dealer can offer this Bonded Protection.

VITAMIX

Stephen E. Stoltzfus of Kinzer, Pa., nearly lost his cow until he started using Vitamix.

Stephen states: "I had a cow that had become so ill the vet told me she would be dead within a few hours, however; I wasn't about to give up. I fed the cow 2 heaping teaspoons of Vitamix every hour for eight hours and within two days she was up walking around like nothing ever happened. This particular cow's problem was that she had a hard delivery and was internally injured from the birthing process. After the use of Vitamix the cow recovered fully, now milks 65 lbs. a day and was bred back after her troubled delivery in just 60 days. Stephen goes on to say, 'I also had a donkey that had a life threatening (terminal), problem and after what I saw Vitamix do for the cow, I used it on the donkey. Now the donkey is very healthy.'

"The most recent incident I've had on the farm was a cow that had a quarter completely drop out. It was seriously infected and she was very ill. I used the same dosage as I used for the cow that had just freshened (2 heaping teaspoons of Vitamix every hour for eight hours). The cows quarter healed up and she now milks fine on three quarters. In all these cases I did it without a vet or antibiotics but, by using Vitamix. The last time I used an antibiotic or a vet was over a year ago and this saves the farm a great deal of money. The usual procedure for using Vitamix would be 2 heaping teaspoons 6 times a day except for in more serious cases."

Vitamix is made by the same people who make Formula M.
Why go looking for a product that Claims to be Similar to Vitamix or Formula M??? When you can buy the original Vitamix and Formula M by calling the number below!!!

THE TALE OF TWO CALVES

I recently had the opportunity to go through some steer calves on a farm, and it struck me that here was a good example of some of the things we are trying to teach our commercial beef producers around the state about the economics of feeder calf production.

I saw two calves that were representative of these thoughts. One calf was a smokey steer that was weighed off the cow the other day at 812 pounds. In most cases this, of course, would appear to be a tremendous calf, and is certainly way ahead of the average calf in Pennsylvania.

The other calf was a black steer that was weighed off at 684 pounds. Again, this was an above-average calf. The question becomes: what is the real value of these calves in terms of production cost and value in the marketplace? More importantly, which kind of calf will be more profitable for the commercial beef industry?

Using the actual prices received for preconditioned feeder calves at the recent sale of the Pennsylvania Roundup calves, there are these actual sale values:

Calf #1	812 lbs.	$.76/lb	$617.12
Calf #2	684 lbs.	$.8475	$579.69
Difference			$ 37.43

Again, the big calf certainly appears to be more profitable. But is that the end of the story? I think we all know it never will be because we have to compare the costs of producing those calves, too.

The dam of the big calf weighed 1,812 pounds the same day, and the dam of the other calf weighed 1,364 pounds. In checking the maintenance requirements of these two cows, it can be shown the additional maintenance requirement of the bigger cow is 20 percent higher. In terms of hay, that is 2,400 additional pounds of hay per year.

Since they are Simmental crosses, there is evidence that it is probably even more than this. Based on our estimates of pasture dry matter from a recent grazing study, there was an average of about 2,600 pounds of dry matter on an acre of this pasture during the year.

The bigger cow, then, needs about one acre more of grass every year. Therefore, on a hay-equivalent basis, the bigger cow costs $98.55 more a year at $80 per ton for hay. This is also an equivalent annual cost of land valued at about $1,000 per acre.

The actual value to the enterprise for the bigger calf becomes $617.12 - $98.55 = $518.57.

In the real world, that 812-pound calf has cost the enterprise more than $60 more than the smaller calf. You may wish to argue the difference in price for the two calves. There are certainly areas in the country where there would be no discount on the non-black steer, and there are several studies to show that, in general, cattle with a black hide will not grade any better or worse than any other color.

It doesn't matter whether we agree with this reasoning of black being better — calf buyers in our region will continue to sit on the seats or on the phone and bid them $10-$12 higher. Producers can only pay bills from the check they receive, and not what we believe to be theoretically correct.

The only assessment of profitability for a calf or a cow herd is the difference in the returns and the costs. Bigger is not better when it costs more.

Costs And Returns For Minerals

One of the most-often asked questions I receive is about what minerals to feed and how to feed them. The answer is not always easy because we do not have a lot of information to prove what advice to give. Here are a few of the things we do know:

- Phosphorus is usually the most deficient mineral and is related to reduced reproductive efficiency.
- I have not seen any controlled experiments to show that "chelated" or "organic" minerals will be cost-effective when a reasonable mineral nutrition program is in place.
- Red salt blocks have traces of other minerals, and they are really just sources of salt.
- Minerals come from everything a cow eats or drinks, so water high in copper or some other mineral will supply part of the need.
- Magnesium and selenium additions to free-choice minerals are probably needed in Pennsylvania.
- Some mineral mixes cost too much for the benefit they produce. If you buy expensive minerals, be sure you get some service — such as a forage analysis — with them.
- Homemade mixes can work fine, but the convenience factor is important to some producers.
- Addition of zinc to a reasonable mineral nutrition program will not prevent footrot.
- The three major minerals needed by cows are calcium, phosphorus, and potassium, and these minerals are plentiful in good, lush pasture. Magnesium and selenium would still be deficient.
- A blood sample from a cow will tell little about the mineral status of the animal.
- A mineral analysis of forages or pasture is only a window in time of what minerals are present over a growing season.
- If cows eat 3 ounces of mineral per day, that costs $300 per ton. The annual cost per cow is $10.26. That is 15-20 pounds of weaning weight in a calf or the value of having 51 instead of 50 cows get pregnant and wean a calf next year because of the minerals they ate.

Solution:

Minerals are insurance, so the cost should not exceed the benefit. Provide a free-choice mix that meets the cow's daily needs for calcium, phosphorus, potassium, magnesium, and selenium if they eat .25 to .3 pounds per day.

Don't Let Lice Louse Up Your Livestock

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Livestock lice could be an unwanted Christmas present for many producers if they aren't careful.

During the winter months, animals crowd together to keep warm, and if one has lice, the pests could easily spread throughout the herd, said Bill Lyon, Ohio State University extension entomologist.

"Lice tend to flourish in cold weather," Lyon said. "A few lice in a herd in December can translate into high lice populations by late winter or early spring."

Lice bite and suck blood from infested animals, which causes itching. In cattle, rubbing fences, gates, and buildings to soothe the itch uses energy and can cause weight loss if feed amounts are not increased. Lice may cause up to 68 pounds per head weight loss if not properly controlled.

If a cattle herd has a history of springtime lice problems, the producer should consider a December treatment. Some producers treat for lice in September or October, but with a fall treatment, cattle lice are often controlled and not eliminated. With the onset of cooler weather, the lice re-establish populations by year's end and without further treatment can rebuild to large numbers during the winter.

"Treating cattle in December before the coldest winter weather arrives should clean the herd up real well," Lyon said.

Hog lice are bluish-black, small insects — about one-quarter inch long — that cling to the hair on the neck, behind the ears, and in the folds of the skin on hogs. They can survive up to three days off the pig in warm bedding and spread to other pigs without direct animal contact.

Damage from hog lice is primarily irritation that makes hogs restless, decreasing feed intake and growth rate. Anemia may occur in young pigs because of blood loss from lice, and the pests can transmit hog diseases, such as swine pox. Estimates of annual losses to pork producers from lice and mange range from $30 million to $200 million throughout the United States, Lyon said.

All animals in a cattle or hog herd should be treated for lice at the same time to prevent reinfestation. If animals are purchased from another farm, they should be isolated and inspected for lice before being introduced to the herd.

"All animals should be isolated in a separate building until they can be treated for internal and external parasites, as well as other disease problems," Lyon said.

An animal's hair coat thickens during the winter, so for proper lice inspection, part the hairs and use a flashlight to check the coat. Producers checking cattle should pay special attention to the tail, head and shoulder areas, he said.

If treatment is needed, systemic pesticides — carried throughout the body in the blood — are the easiest to use and may be the most economical, especially during cold weather. Sprays are the cheapest when considering strictly cost, but they must be applied twice at three-week intervals because the residue from sprays does not last long enough to kill all lice hatching from eggs, Lyon said.

Sprayed or dipped treatments should not be used during severely cold weather to prevent unnecessary chilling of animals. Producers should wait for sunny, calm days when temperatures are above freezing before using sprays.

Even with December treatments, producers should inspect animals for lice throughout the winter.

"Most insecticides kill adults but have little effect on lice eggs, so animals should be re-examined about three weeks after treatment to determine if viable lice eggs have hatched and reinforced the herd," Lyon said.

Producers shouldn't worry about lice spreading from one animal species to another or from animals to humans. Lice are host specific, so for example, if hog lice fall off a hog, they will either jump onto another hog or die, he said.

For more information about lice and lice treatments, producers should contact their county office of Ohio State University Extension and ask for Extension Bulletin 473, "Livestock and Livestock Building Pest Management."

Adams County Names Beef Champions

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Adams County 4-H Beef Show champions were recently named.

The grand champion steer, show by Chris Seymore, York Springs, was purchased by GS Communications, represented by Annette Delphaine for $4.10 per pound.

Missy Jeffcoat showed the reserve grand champion steer. The steer was purchased by Hoss's Steak and Sea House for $2.40 per pound. The reserve champion steer was resold to benefit Adams County 4-H Beef Club activities.

Wool Summit Gathers Input On Industry

DENVER, Colo. — Scientific research and technical advances have made agriculture an ever-evolving industry.

Aware of these changes, the American Sheep Industry Association convened to determine the overall future needs of the sheep and wool industry, The Wool Quality Improvement Summit in Denver recently.

The meeting was held to gather input on the future of the wood industry and define goals to achieve by 2000, and develop strategies to implement the established goal objectives. Forty people attended the Wood Quality Improvement Summit from 18 states. Among the attendees were sheep and wool producers, woolen mills representatives, wool buyers, university and agricultural research people, agricultural extension agents, and others representing the varying aspects of the wood industry.

Three Pennsylvania residents participated in the Wool Quality Summit: Dr. Clair Engle, animal scientist, Penn State, Ginny Wright, sheep producer and wool classer II, Montrose; and Lynn Zerphey, sheep producer and wool classer II, Halifax.

Through a series of meetings and discussions groups, industry strengths and weakness were identified. The following consensus of goals and actions plans were established:

• Goal #1-Industry Standards — to establish and implement industry standards that position the US wool industry as a competitive and valued supplier of high quality wool.

• Goal #2-Communication/Information/Education — to create a comprehensive qualilty assurance program involving certification programs, training for workers and effective communication.

• Goal #3-Genetics — to achieve improved genetics in U.S. flocks for uniformity and increased fleece yield, establish management programs to support genetics, and elilmination of black fiber in white wools.

For each of the named goals, a small committee was elected to address the key issues, develop detailed plans, and report back the summit participants for a consensus. If approved, implementation will begin mid-January 1998. Ginny Wright was selected to participate on the communication/education committee.

Maryland Breeder Elected President Of Angus Association

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Lawrason Sayre, Churchville, Md., is the new president of the American Angus Association. He was elected at the association's 1997 annual meeting in Louisville, Ky., to replace retiring president Bill Wilson, Cloverdale, Ind.

The annual meeting and election was conducted by some 276 delegates elected to represent American Angus Association members from their respective states. The meeting was held in the Kentucky Fair and Expostion Center in conjunction with the North American International Livestock Exposition.

Bill Borror, Tehama Angus Ranch, Gerber, Calif., was elected vice president, and three Angus breeders were elected to their first three-year term on the 15-member American Angus Association board of directors. They are Keith Arntzen, Hilger, Mont.; Minnie Lou Bradley, Memphis, Texas; and Abbie Nelson, Wilton, Calif. Re-elected to a second term on the board was Leroy Baldwin, Ocala, Fla., and Henry Bergfield, Summitville, Ohio.

Lawrason Sayre, the new association president, has been breeding registered Angus cattle for more than 40 years at Waffle Hill Farm near Churchville, Md. His herd has long been based on performance evaluation, first on the Maryland Beef Cattle Improvement Association program and later with the American Angus Association's Angus Herd Improvement Records (AHIR) program.

Sayre earned a civil engineering degree from Yale University. In 1960, after serving as a U.S. Marine Corps officer in the Korean War, and working as a civil engineer, Sayre purchased his farm and turned to breeding registered Angus cattle. The farm is operated by Sayre, his wife Jane and their son Ned. In addition to serving six years on the American Angus Association board of directors, Sayre has served as vice president and treasurer of the organization. He is a past president of the Maryland Angus Association and has been honored for his many years of service as a 4-H club leader and livestock judging coach.

Sayre has long been involved in soil conservation and is serious about environmental protection. In 1991 he was awarded the Angus Journal Land Stewardship Award, and the following year won the National Cattlemen's Beef Association Environmental Stewardship Award for region one.

Bill Borror, the association's new vice president, just completed his second three-year term on the board of directors and a one-year term as association treasurer. A life-long Angus breeder, Borror enrolled his first cow in the University of California Record of Performance Program in 1944. An honors graduate from the University of California — Davis with a degree in animal science, he served two years in the U.S. Army before he and his wife Sandy returned to form a partnership with his parents in Tehama Angus Ranch.

Today the ranch covers some 1,400 acres and includes almonds and other crops, as well as Angus cattle. Borror owned one of the first reference sires used by the American Angus Association in the Sire Evaluation program. He is past president of the California Beef Cattle Improvement Association. He has been a director of the Beef Improvement Federation (BIF). In 1983 he served as BIF president and was also named BIF Seedstock Producer of the Year.

Keith Arntzen

Keith Arntzen, a new association board member from Hilger, Mont., is the third generation to operate his family ranch. He manages the Angus herd started by his father and mother in 1953. He is a partner in the operation with his wife Kristine, his brother Doug and Doug's wife Gayle. The ranch covers 16,000 acres with 300 registered Angus cows and 300 commercial cows. They also farm 4,000 dryland acres. Their herd was enrolled in the Montana Beef Performance Association in 1970, and soon after that in the American Angus Association's AHIR program.

Arntzen served six years on the board of directors of the Montana Angus Association. He served eight years as secretary-treasurer of the Central Montana Angus Association, and also as vice president and president. He has been appointed to a variety of community boards including the Central Montana Community Hotel Association and the Fergus County Farm Bureau.

Leroy Baldwin

Leroy Baldwin, Ocala, Fla., was elected to his second three-year term on the American Angus Association board, where he previously served on the planning and industry, rules and arbitration and public relations committees. He bought his first Angus calf in 1947, the beginning of Baldwin Angus Ranch. Baldwinn started performance testing the herd in 1960. The ranch now comprises 580 acres and 500 head of registered Angus, and is a family-run operation.

A leader in agricultural and Angus activities, Baldwin was inducted into the Florida Agricultural Hall of Fame in 1995. In 1993 he was recognized as Southern Farmer of the Year and Florida Farmer of the Year. Progressive Farmer magazine named him Man of the Year in Service to Florida 1993. For 32 years he has been a member of the Florida International Trade Council, and president for the last 12 years. He has served as president of the Florida Cattlemen's Association and the Florida Beef Cattle Improvement Association.

Henry Bergfeld

Henry Bergfeld, general manager of Summitcrest Farms, Summitville, Ohio, was elected to his second three-year term on the American Angus Association board of directors. A native of western Pennsylvania, he started showing cattle in 4-H and bought his first Angus female in 1952. He graduated from Pennsylvania State University in 1963 with a degree in animal science. He served last year as chairman of the board of directors of the Certified Angus Beef Program.

As general manager of Summitcrest for the past 31 years, he started with a cow herd of 125 head in Ohio, and has seen it grow to a breeding herd of more than 1,800 females at three locations in Nebraska, Iowa and Ohio. He has developed a global market for Summitcrest genetics. Under his direction Summitcrest has collected data on more than 2,700 carcasses. In 1991 Summitcrest was named Beef Improvement Federation Seedstock Producer of the Year.

Minnie Lou Bradley

Minnie Lou Bradley, a new member of the American Angus Association board of directors from Memphis, Texas, was raised on a west-central Oklahoma farm and financed her college education at Oklahoma State with her 4-H Angus herd. She and her husband Bill moved to Childress County, Texas, in 1955 and started Bradley 3 Ranch. The ranch includes 300 registered Angus cows plus a commercial herd. A pioneer in performance evaluation and in the branded beef business, Bradley 3 Ranch opened their own USDA inspected processing plant in Childress in 1986.

In college, Minnie Lou was a member of the Oklahoma State University livestock judging team, and was named high individual at the American Royal contest. After graduation she worked as assistant executive secretary of the Texas Angus Association before starting Bradley 3 Ranch.

Abbie Nelson

Abbie Nelson, a fifth generation Angus breeder from Wilton, Calif., is a newly elected member of the American Angus Association board of directors. She and her husband Mark, and their family own Five Star Land and Livestock, where she makes the herd management and breeding decisions. Her great-grandfather, Thomas Ryan, was one of the first to import Angus into the U.S., and her grandfather, Earl Ryan, and her great-uncle, Charles Esher, made up the historic Esher and Ryan herd in Iowa. Her parents, Catherine and Charles Ryan, owned Rancheria Angus at Petaluma, Calif.

Nelson has served 14 years on the board of the California Angus Association and was president for two terms. She serves on the boards of the Tri-Counties Cattlemen's Association, California Cattlemen's Association, and the California Beef Cattle Improvement Association. She also pioneered the performance bull show at the California State Fair.

Seed Handling System Efficient, Convenient

DES MOINES, Iowa — For spring planting 1998, corn and soybean growers who prefer to handle seed in bulk will have an opportunity to use the new Probox™ Seed Handling System from Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

The Probox system will make it faster and easier to unload bulk seed and more convenient for growers to transport, transfer and store seed on the farm, according to Don Schafer, soybean product manager at Pioneer.

"With the increasing number of 32-foot drills and 24-row planters, handling seed in conventional packaging is a time-consuming process for growers. Bulk seed is becoming very popular, and the new Probox system is the latest innovation in bulk seed handling," Schafer said. "The container is built with many unique features that will help growers get large quantities of seed to the field easily. Their time during planting is extremely valuable. The Probox system will help them plant more acres per day, making the most of their time."

Available on a limited basis for spring 1998 planting, the new Probox container is designed for on-farm use and can be moved and unloaded using a heavy-duty forklift or a forklift attachment for a tractor. Made of rigid injection-molded plastic, the rectangular container features a convenient, center drain hopper bottom which makes unloading simple and easy.

An easy-to-open, sliding flow-control gate allows one person to effortlessly remove all or part of the seed from the container. Because the interior is smooth and seamless, seed cleans out completely in just 30 seconds.

Although the Probox container is not designed for outdoor seed storage, it is nearly weather-tight, so there is reduced risk of seed getting wet or damaged. The tough plastic container also guards seed against damage from rodents and other pests during storage.

Each Probox container will hold 2,500 pounds or the equivalent of 50, 50-pound unit equivalents of soybeans or 50, 80-K unit equivalents of corn for most kernel sizes.

Once the reusable Probox container is emptied, it can be disassembled for storage and return after planting. The top turns upside down to nest over the base, reducing the container to about 40 inches in height for storage. The return process for containers will be similar to that of jumbo bags.

The Probox containers will be available on a limited basis for spring 1998 planting. For more information about ordering bulk seed in the Probox seed handling system, contact your local provider of Pioneer products.

Industrial Uses Symposium A Success

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The only thing more challenging than getting to the top is staying there.

The U.S. Feed Grains Council's office in Tokyo, Japan, is reminded of this reality every day.

Japan is the top importer of U.S. corn, but with competition from other exporters such as China and Argentina, the U.S. Feed Grains Council (USFGS) needs to continue to promote the valuable and varied uses of U.S. corn to maintain its high market share.

A recent symposium on industrial applications of U.S. value-enhanced corn did just that.

The Tokyo VEG/Supply and Demand Symposium, held in conjunction with Japan Starch & Sweeteners Industry Association, attracted participants from all over the agricultural and industrial uses community in Japan. Two hundred seventy people from starch, trading and feed companies, plus government regulators, university researchers, consumer groups, and members of the media filled the two-day symposium to capacity.

Greg Smith, corn producer from Nebraska, gave a U.S. producer perspective on value-enhanced corn while other industry experts presented their finding on genetically modified organisms, starch wet-milling practices, biodegradable plastics, and grain shipping and exporting.

"The symposium went very well," said Dennis Kitch, director USFGC/Japan. "This was a great opportunity for the Council to give the Japanese industry a clear understanding of its value-enhanced grain program."

Many participants expressed their gratitude to the Council for organizing the symposium. "The response from the participants was outstanding," Kitch said. "One of the most common statements I heard was, 'We find the material useful and timely. Attendance is no longer a formality but a special opportunity'."

The symposium was also an opportunity to discuss the issue of genetically modified organisms (GMOs) and their benefits. Diane Re of Monsanto gave a presentation on the topic and met with several key government and consumer group representatives. An article printed by the Japan Agricultural Newspaper touted GMOs as being environmentally friendly because they reduce the need for pesticides. According to Kitch, the newspaper is read by more than 90 percent of Japan's agricultural community.

The true success of the symposium was measured in the number of people who asked if the Council was going to do it again, soon. According to Kitch, the symposium raised a lot of questions. "Will Japanese consumers' calls for GMO informational labeling result in the United States taking Japan to the WTO? How will the United States respond to the growing competition from other corn exporters? What will China do? These questions will keep coming up and we will have to answer them. That may very well mean having another symposium."

Other speakers at the symposium were Catherine Otte, senior agricultural attache, U.S. Embassy; Hiroko Sakashita, associate director, USFGC/Japan; E. Takashita, USFGC biodegradable plastics consultant; Jerry Weigel, Exseed Genetics; Dr. Kent Rausch, University of Illinois; Dr. Milford Hanna, University of Nebraska; Dr. Jacob Lehrfeld, researcher; and Dan Keefe, USFGC manager of international operations.

Summit Outlines Kentucky's Agricultural Future

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — The 1997 Kentucky Agricultural Leadership Summit, held in conjunction with the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE), provides an arena for leaders to discuss how Kentucky can advance, develop and energize modern agriculture in today's ever-changing business and national environment.

Kentucky Department of Agriculture Commissioner Billy Ray Smith organized the sixth Leadership Summit with the goal of using time, effort and imagination to allow Kentucky agriculture to diversify, grow and flourish.

"Determine our Destiny," the theme for this year's Leadership Summit, provided an opportunity for Kentucky farm association representatives, farmers, Kentucky commodity group leaders, legislative members, agribusiness representatives and some members of the Kentucky General Assembly to explore Kentucky's future agricultural opportunities.

According to Sharon Burton, Kentucky Agriculture Council Chair, objectives of the Leadership Summit are designed to help people in agriculture work together to solve problems, share information with people outside of agriculture so they understand current agricultural issues, and remind people of agricultural accomplishments.

Kentucky Department of Agriculture Office for Agricultural Marketing and Promotion Executive Director Gene Royalty said the Leadership Summit is held in conjunction with the NAILE, because those involved in changing Kentucky's agriculture are also interested in the top-quality purebred animals represented at the NAILE.

The Leadership Summit offered concurrent sessions involving marketing of crops and livestock, reaching consumers and interacting with other state's successful programs.

Representatives from the Kentucky Agricultural Resources Development Authority (KARDA) also attended the Leadership Summit to show their commitment to a bold new future in Kentucky agriculture.

Bruce Harper, KARDA chair, said, "Agriculture is changing from a production — driven to a market-driven economy. This changing marketing infrastructure will add significantly to the commonwealth (of Kentucky)." Harper's view reinforces the overall Summit theme that it is important for Kentucky to keep up with technology in order to compete in today's economy.

Kentucky Gov. Paul E. Patton attended the opening session of the Leadership Summit to support agriculture, because "agriculture is tremendously important in the preservation of Kentucky," he said. Gov. Patton said Kentucky is still a rural state that promotes rural work ethics and farm family values.

The Leadership Summit concluded Nov. 14 with a "Congressional Update of Agricultural Issues and Tobacco Settlement" as well as USDA presentation and remarks from Kentucky Lieutenant Governor Stephen L. Henry.

Late Blight Has Greenhouse Tomato Growers On Alert

WOOSTER, Ohio — Late blight outbreaks in several tomato greenhouses have Ohio tomato growers on the alert.

Ohio State's Sally Miller, plant pathologist at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center in Wooster, said the late blight disease appeared suddenly in a few Ohio greenhouses and extensive damage occured soon after.

"Late blight appears on the tomato leaves in pale-green, water-soaked spots, often beginning at the leaf tips or edges. The circular or irregular leaf lesions are usually surrounded by a pale yellowish-green border that merges with healthy tissue," Miller said. "Lesions enlarge rapidly and turn dark brown to purplish black."

When humidity is high and the leaves are wet for an extended period, a cottony, white mold growth is usually visible on lower leaf surfaces at the edge of the lesions. When conditions are dry, infected leaf tissues quickly dry up and the white mold growth disappears. Infected areas on stems appear brown to black and entire vines may be killed quickly if moist conditions persist.

Blight also appears on fruit — as somewhat crinkled, coppery-brown, discolored areas. The fruit may remain firm as the lesions progress. Under moist conditions, a white, fluffy mold may appear. Symptoms appear on both red and green fruit.

Miller said that all of the cases of late blight in greenhouse tomatoes observed so far have some factors in common. "The disease occurred just as warm days were turning into cold nights, and the greenhouses were not heated properly, often due to mechanical problems. The plants remained wet for long periods of time, and the relative humidity was consistently very high."

Miller also said that the fungus that causes late blight — Phytophthora — was often present somewhere nearby. "It could have come from tomatoes or possibly potatoes in home gardens located in the vicinity of the greenhouse. Killing frosts had not yet occurred in these areas."

New strains of Phytophthora infestans have recently appeared in the United States. Several of them are much more aggressive on tomatoes than the previous, widely prevalent strain. "Most of the new strains are not affected by metalaxyl, a commonly used fungicide sold as Ridomil or Subdue," Miller said.

Ohio State plant pathologist Randy Rowe said the potential of this late blight disease is the main concern right now. "This disease has been causing a nationwide epidemic, and until now, we've seen very little damage in Ohio. Now, we have a flurry of it at the end of the potato and tomato season, and it's sneaking into tomato greenhouses."

Rowe said damage so far is limited — only a handful of growers have been affected by the disease. "It's not a dollars and cents issue right now because damage has been limited. The main issue of concern is next year — what Ohio growers may face through out the next season."

There are precautions greenhouse growers can take to prevent late blight from attacking their tomatoes. "Maintain greenhouse temperatures of 68 degrees Fahrenheit or higher. Reduce relative humidity in the greenhouse and maintain good air circulation," Miller said. "Any practice that reduces the amount of time that plants are wet is helpful."

Miller also recommends scouting the greenhouse regularly to look for symptoms of the disease. If symptoms of late blight do appear, the temperature and moisture within the greenhouse should be adjusted. "A fungicide containing mancozeb (Dithane M-45 or another formulation) may be applied to the plants if label instructions are followed. Mancozeb is a protective fungicide and will not cure infected plants," Miller said.

Mancozeb is labeled for greenhouse use but there is a five-day preharvest interval (PHI). In addition, mancozeb is an EBDC compound. Some markets may not accept fruit treated with this fungicide. There is no other fungicide effective in controlling this disease that is labeled for use on tomatoes in the greenhouse.

Greenhouse growers should remove plant parts if a small amount of the tissue is involved. "Place it in a plastic bag and either place the bag outside at night to freeze or inside to decompose completely. The late blight fungus cannot survive on dead tissue," Miller said.

"If whole plants must be removed, cut them at the base and allow them to dry completely on the trellis after removing and destroying all of the infected fruit. If a large amount of plant matter must be disposed of, spread it outside in a thin layer when freezing temperatures are expected."

Miller warned that discarded plants should not be placed in piles — infected tissue inside the pile may be warm enough for the fungus to survive and provide spores to infect plants again next spring.

Take Stock Of Alfalfa And Buy

MONTROSE (Susquehanna Co.) — Supplies of premium-quality alfalfa are tight everywhere, but not near as sparse as they are in the East.

Compared with last year, alfalfa production is down 15 percent in New York, 19 percent in Pennsylvania, 16 percent in Michigan, and 20 percent in Kentucky.

Several nearby states increased alfalfa production this year, but not enough to stem the drain from large eastern dairy states, said agronomisst Dave Petritz, Purdue University. "It's not a good time to be out there with a bunch of hungry cows facing you," he said.

Demand for hay will be aggressive this winter, as eastern buyers seek to offset reduced production with hay from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, and other Midwest states. USDA estimates show alfalfa production as of Oct. 1 up 19 percent in Indiana, up 3 percent in Ohio, and flat in Illinois, but damage to the Upper Midwest's third cutting has cut deeply into supplies of premium quality hay there.

USDA's latest production report shows Wisconsin production down 1 percent, a 4 percent decline from August's estimate. "But the big hit was in Minnesota," Petritz noted.

Estimates now show Minnesota's production down 8 percent compared with last year, a 16 percent decline from August's estimate that showed production 8 percent higher than a year ago.

If the East Coast drains the Midwest, Midwest buyers may think they can just go to the Great Plains for supply. But guess what? The Great Plains are short," Petritz said. "Buyers will have to look to the southern plains or mountain states for alfalfa, and they'll have to pay more to ship it in."

Petritz predicts that prices could reach $300 per ton again in the Midwest. Prices all summer have remained near the typical winter price levels of $125-150 per ton, with some loads reaching $200 per ton.

How high prices actually soar will depend on several factors. A large silage harvest, mild winter, and the willingness of producers to adjust rations could all curtail demand.

Petritz recommends that dairy producers who have not yet purchased supplemental alfalfa assess their needs, evaluate changing their rations, consider culling their herds, and arrange for financing before the heavy winter demand period.

"It's been one disaster after another in the East," Petritz said. Not one cutting came by unscathed. The region was first hit with high humidity and frequent rains, which cut into first cutting quality. Dry weather in June and July sharply reduced second-cutting yields. Then an unseasonably cool August slowed regrowth, while insect damage chewed deeper into quality.

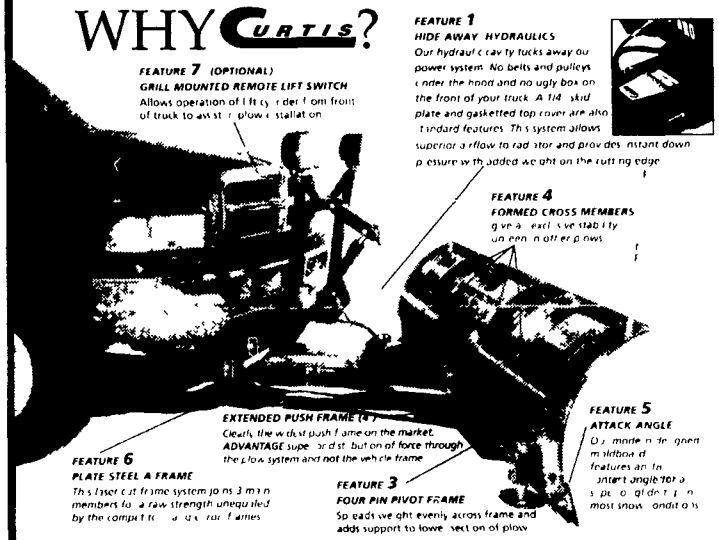
WHY CURTIS?



FEATURE 7 (OPTIONAL)
GRILL MOUNTED REMOTE LIFT SWITCH
Allows operation of lift cylinder from front of truck to assist plow installation
FEATURE 1
HIDE AWAY HYDRAULICS
Our hydraulic cavity tucks away our power system. No belts and pulleys under the hood and no ugly box on the front of your truck. A tilt skid plate and gasketted top cover are also standard features. This system allows superior airflow to radiator and provides instant down pressure with added weight on the cutting edge
FEATURE 4
FORMED CROSS MEMBERS
FEATURE 5
ATTACK ANGLE
EXTENDED PUSH FRAME
Clearly the strongest push frame on the market. ADVANTAGE superior distribution of force through the plow system and not the vehicle frame
FEATURE 6
PLATE STEEL A FRAME
FEATURE 3
FOUR PIN PIVOT FRAME

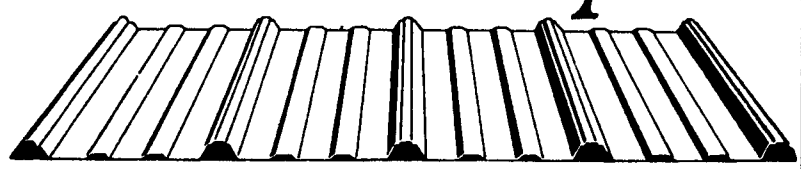
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Centurydrain® roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

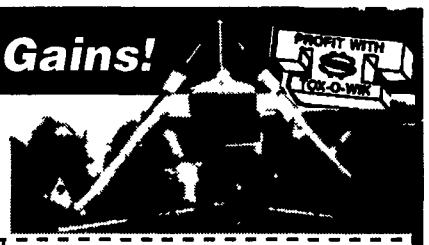
Increase Cattle Gains!

TOX-O-WIK® Cattle Oiler and Face Fly Fighter



It keeps cattle comfortable year around and free of weight-robbing insects and disease. It's automatic, trouble-free and rugged. Plus it pays for itself in profits from increased weight gains.

Our special TOX-A-WIK Insecticide is compatible with the animals natural body oils, skin and hair and keeps them free of flies, lice, grubs, ticks, mange and pinkeye.

- Insecticide tank wick feeds automatically, no valves, jets or pumps to clog.
- Mineral feeder
- 1 to 4 applicators per unit.
- TOX-O-WIK insecticide is the only insecticide recommended for TOX-O-WIK Cattle Oilers.
- Dairy units also available.

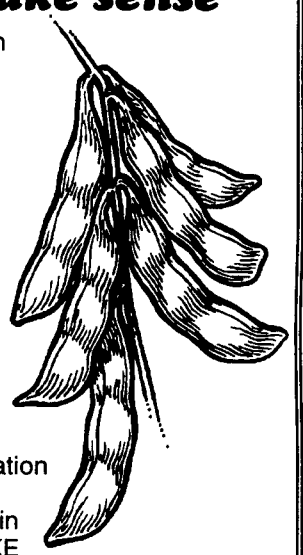
BUYERS OF ORGANIC
CORN—SOYBEANS—WHEAT—BARLEY

Sell your beans?
"It just doesn't make sense"
1. Why loose the 18% high energy oil in your own beans?
2. Why let the soybean processor take the valuable lechicin?
3. Why forfeit 50% of the metabolizable energy over SBM?
4. Why pay storage, trucking and shrink?



Be sensible!
Let SCHNUPP'S custom roast your Soybeans

Receive the value of added fat in your ration - MORE MILK
Get the most By-Pass Protein available in your beans - MORE PROTEIN UPTAKE
Keep all the nutritional components originally in the soybean. - MORE FLEXIBILITY
Soybeans are valuable, keep profits at home! - MORE FARM INCOME

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

2,700 Lbs. INCREASE

Because of the many good cow families in the Mile-EE Registered Holstein herd of Joe and Peg Meily family, Lebanon, it is hard to say which one is the best. As their 24,888m rolling herd average on 75 cows would indicate, many cows in the herd milk over 30,000 pounds of milk per lactation. At the last test 16 cows were milking over 100 pounds per day. Their highest daily production record is 150 pounds.

Joe and Peg, along with daughters Brenda and Karen, have developed a special outlook on dairy cow management that gives special attention to each individual cow. Mattresses and tunnel ventilation have been added recently for additional cow comfort. Three groups are fed according to production needs to insure that each cow is receiving the nutrients she needs. This also insures the greatest efficiency on feeding costs too.

The herd is fed TMR with corn silage and haylage balanced with Purina's new Proteus concentrate that has received national acclaim for its more efficient use of protein. While the Meily herd increased 2,700 pounds of milk in the last year since starting to feed this new feed, because of the efficiency, they have reduced protein needs from 18 percent to 16.5 percent.

"Seven years ago our herd was sliding backward in production, and we were spinning our wheels trying to get it back up again," Peg said. "Purina's representatives impressed us by their helpfulness even before we made the change to Purina feeds. And since we have been feeding Purina, their people have continued to work faithfully to help us increase our production."

Brenda agrees, "The service from Umbergers of Fontana, has been excellent," she said. "They are prompt in getting feed to us, and they try to be as accommodating as possible. We would recommend Purina feeds to anyone because of the personal touch they give to their good products. Feeding Purina feeds has been good for us."
